Volynov and Zholobov

Everything's fine aboard Salyut-5

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Two Soviet cosmonauts docked their Soyúz-21 ferry vehicle Wednesday with the unmanned orbital station Salyut-5 and both transferred to it, Tass news agency reported.

Soviet television said the two men boarded Salyut, which was launched on June 22.

The regular television evening news program was interrupted for the special bulletin from ground control at Yevpatoria in the Crimea.

The cosmonauts, Col. Boris Volynov and Lieut. Colonel Vitaly Zholobov, docked with the station nearly five hours before boarding it, the reporter said.

"The most difficult phase of their work has been completed," he said.

Another cosmonaut, Alexei Yeliseyev, told the television reporter that the two had carried out a visual check of Salyut and reported that everything on board was working normally.

Viking delayed again as search goes on

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — Viking scientists Wednesday postponed for the second time the landing of Viking 1 on Mars because the alternate site was discovered to be rougher than expected.

A spokesman said scientists are now looking at a more westerly area of the Chryse Planitia, where they said the terrain was smoother. But a landing cannot be made any earlier than July 20. They had planned a July 17 landing.

The second site, in the northwest territory of the original A-1 landing area, was rejected after scientists studied radar data that indicated it was more rugged than the original site.

"New radar results obtained July 3 and 4 at the Arecibo Observatory in Puerto Rico indicate that a more westerly area of Chryse Planitia may be smoother than the previously selected northwest site," a jet propulsion laboratory spokesman said.

The new site has not been photographed by Viking 1, but radar data has been obtained.

Construction

'Bad break' slows pact talks

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Reporter

An air of gloom settled over the embattled construction scene Wednesday leaving negotiators with little hope of early settlement to the province-wide lockout-strike situation.

"We had a bad break today. The metal trades group threw a curve at us and it's questionable whether they'll be back," said George Wheaton, Construction Labor Relations Association chairman.

Wheaton, who heads a Victoria construction firm, has been taking part in continuing talks between CLRA and the unions in Vancouver.

"There's less than progress at this stage," he said.

The breakup with the eight metal trade unions came during a stalemate on individual union problems. Wheaton said discussion of monetary items "is still a long way off."

The unions have remained split in two camps with the metal trades in one and the basic trades in the other. The basic trades are headed by the carpenters, biggest of the 22 unions involved in the dispute.

A spokesman for the B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council said he understood little had been achieved during the talks so far. However, because of the lack of joint bargaining, the council is all but out of the picture. It serves as an umbrella organization for the construction unions.

Wheaton said certain individual demands of the cement masons, iron workers and electricians carried the threat of renewed strike action if they weren't resolved in any over-all settlement.

The cement masons and carpenters took strike action before CLRA imposed an industry-wide lockout eight days ago. It is the fourth consecutive bargaining year shutdown since 1970 and it has brought work to a halt on the major share of an estimated $3 billion in building projects.

It was also to have idled 40,000 tradesmen, but union spokesmen say varying numbers are still employed on small jobs being carried out by union contractors who do not belong to CLRA.

On Vancouver Island alone, only 1,400 of 5,500 tradesmen are reported to have been affected so far by the shutdown.

Some 850 contracting firms are represented by CLRA.

Wheaton said the cement masons are only willing to forego their demand for a catch-up wage increase if it is withheld from other unions with the same demand.

He said cement masons business agent Frank Stevens told CLRA negotiators his union is prepared to "stay out until Christmas" unless its demand is met.

Past shutdowns have lasted as long as three months.

There has been no movement toward new discussion of wage rates since CLRA's offer of an across-the-board eight per cent package increase was rejected June 2.

Wheaton repeated his charge that some of the union leaders are more interested in inter-union politics and rivalry than in the welfare of their members.

"The time has come for them to stop playing games with the welfare of the industry, their memberships and the economy of the country," he said.

Because a paralysis of construction is viewed by the government as a serious threat to the economy, Labor Minister Allan Williams has been keeping a close watch on developments. But to date he has made no effort to intervene.

While Wheaton heaps the blame on the unions, CLRA has been accused by a number of union leaders of creating the fragmented union bargaining structure that exists. They say that in the past CLRA has brought unions "in the back door" to deal with them separately.

Wheaton said CLRA's invitation to deal with individual union problems in the current talks has produced issues that weren't presented in the earlier talks.

"One union has confronted us with 12 or 13 pages of proposals we hadn't seen before," he said.

While he doesn't expect many of the metal trade unions to return to the bargaining table today, talks are scheduled with a number of other unions.

Queen delivers Rose Garden speech to U.S.

WASHINGTON — Queen Elizabeth raised her glass to the United States Wednesday night at a White House banquet as she told an audience of 200 that "today, no nation can stand alone."

"We depend as never before upon each other."

In an air-conditioned tent in the White House Rose Garden, the queen quoted her ancestor, King George III, in the words he pronounced to John Adams in 1785:

"I was the last man in the kingdom to consent to the separation. But the separation having been made, I have always said, as I say now, that I would be the first to meet the friendship of the United States as an independent power."

John Adams, who went on to become president of the U.S., was the first envoy to England from his new country.

"Both our peoples believe in the world of the individual and the family, in the freedom of religion and expression, and in the right to change a government by the ballot box rather than the gun, perhaps the best definition of democracy," the queen said.

"That is why, time and time again, in the testing days of war and the constructive years of peace, we have

Canadians support IOC

MONTREAL (UPI) — The Canadian Olympic Association sided with the International Olympic Committee Wednesday night and protested the federal government's stand on Taiwan's participation at the 1976 Summer Olympics as "a serious and unacceptable breach of faith."

In a formal statement, COA president Harold M. Wright said "the COA fully supports and endorses the position taken by the IOC in the matter.

"Political interference in the Olympic games, particularly where access of athletes to the country in which the games are being held is denied or interferred with, is unacceptable and contrary to the assurances required and obtained by the IOC when the games are awarded.

"The COA is as concerned as the IOC with the ramifications of the attitude of the Canadian government in its possible extension to future Olympic games."

Wright said when the COA approved Montreal's bid for the Games in 1969 it was on assurances from the Canadian government that it would allow entry to all athletes recognized by the IOC.

Wright stressed that "in the context of the Olympic Games, the question of principle involved was far more important than the particular facts of the two-China policy which has given rise to the controversy."

Canada's decision to recognize the People's Republic of China in 1970 did not alter Ottawa's "firm undertaking" in 1969 when Montreal prepared its application, he said.

'Mocking' U.K. press criticized by Indians

EDMONTON (CP) — Six Alberta Indian chiefs returned Wednesday afternoon less than happy with their nine-day visit to the United Kingdom.

At a legislative building reception, some of the chiefs aired their views on the trip.

Both Chiefs John Snow and and Joe Dion said they expected the British press to have an unclear view of Indians but said that what they experienced was "mocking coverage."

Some British newspapers made references to "Injuns" and cartoons showed them dancing around a dinner table with tomahawks in their hands.

"I didn't expect a real good report from the press," said Snow. "But the queen was really quite receptive to us" and had extended the time allotted for their meeting.

"Our mission was to remind the queen that we have treaties with her. We are here to stay but our treaties have not been observed."

Snow was particularly impressed with the reception in Scotland.

"We have something in common with the people of Scotland," said Snow. "We both don't have a say in the decision-making process with our governments."

Dion said English people "seemed disappointed that we didn't act like they thought an indian should."

"They have a stereotyped idea of Indians. They figured we should be like the cowboys and Indian movies they see," he said.

"Our reception with the queen went well but I sensed an uneasiness on her part. She didn't know quite what to expect, and we didn't get a chance to give a good statement on the treaties.

"She said the question of the treaties was very serious and then changed the subject."

'Think again on fares'

NANAIMO — The Social Credit candidate for Nanaimo in the last provincial election has called on Transport Minister Jack Davis to take another look at the increased ferry rates.

Graeme Roberts, who finished behind David Stupich (NDP) in the Dec. 11, 1975, voting, said Wednesday that governments are capable of making mistakes but, he added, "governments sensitive to the will of the people are equally capable of correcting their mistakes," and, he added, "do it."

He said in his letter to the minister that he was speaking for thousands of working people in calling for a rollback in rates.

"Pocket your pride," Roberts said. "Adjust your decision to where the 'fare is fair' and not beyond the means of the people you serve."

Roberts said one didn't need to be a Rhodes scholar to understand which was better for the Island economy — ferries full at $5 a car or ferries half full at $10 a car.

Surprise ahead

MOSES LAKE, Wash. (UPI) — Whoever made off with a rod and reel, tackle box and cooler from a pickup truck parked at a local tavern near Moses Lake better have quick reflexes.

Police say the cooler contained several cans of beer and three large, live rattlesnakes caught by the owner.

Jack the Ripper—a royal U.K. coverup?

LONDON (Reuter) — A royal love affair, a freemason conspiracy and a big government coverup were at the bottom of the Jack-the-Ripper murder mystery which has intrigued Britons for 90 years, says a new book published Wednesday.

Author Stephen Knight, who researched the gruesome murders of East End prostitutes in 1888, claims three killers were involved, including Queen Victoria's personal physician.

He says the victims—records differ between five and eight—were all eliminated after they tried to blackmail the British government over a secret marriage between Princess Alexandra's eldest son, Prince Eddy, later the Duke of Clarence, and a comely shopgirl named Annie Crook. The marriage produced a daughter.

The alleged villains were Prime Minister Lord Salisbury who supposedly ordered the freemasons to silence the blackmailers and Sir William Gull, the Queen's physician, who, the book says, carried out the freemason conspiracy aided by a coachman named John Netley and the Assistant Commissioner of Police, Sir Robert Anderson.

The book, Jack the Ripper—The Final Solution, exonerates the aged Queen Victoria, who, it says, suspected a cover-up but had no knowledge of the conspiracy.

The author, who says he was allowed to examine secret Scotland Yard files on the mystery, writes that it all began when painter Walter Sickert introduced the young prince to the shopgirl.

They fell in love, a daughter was born and the prince went through a secret Catholic wedding ceremony.

But when news of the affair reached the government, it felt a scandal would give the coup de grace to an already unpopular monarchy. Lord Salisbury staged a raid on the lovers' hideout at Sickert's home during which the prince was seized. Annie Crook was certified insane and confined to Sir William Guy's hospital until her death 32 years later.

But an Irish nanny, Marie Kelly, escaped with the couple's child. The nanny told the story to some East End prostitutes who planned a blackmail plot which cost them their lives.

The alleged killers, led by Sir William, enticed the girls one by one into a coach and mutilated them, giving the impression that the murders were the work of a sex maniac.

Most of the book's evidence is based on a story told by Sickert to his son Joseph, whose mother was alleged to have been the daughter of the prince and the shopgirl. She later became the painter's mistress.

Spectators greet Queen Elizabeth in Washington

stood together on things that matter.

"The world has changed a great deal since the declaration was signed in Independence Hall 200 years ago. Over the generations, the British people have watched with admiration how you, with ingenuity and resource, first peopled and settled a continent, and then undertook a world role which has brought great and lasting benefits to the world of mankind."

Earlier, on her arrival with Prince Philip from the first stop on their U.S. tour in Philadelphia, the queen was welcomed with pomp and ceremony seldom seen in Washington.

The high point of the ceremonies, however, was the dinner attended by President Ford and his wife.

Ford, calling the tributes and exchanges of Elizabeth's visit "truly a reaffirmation" of friendship, said that in its third century the United States "will be on the side of the United Kingdom and the United Kingdom will be on the side of the United States."

In her brief speech, the Queen made an oblique reference to the burning of the White House by British troops about 160 years ago and said:

"However, having provided you with the opportunity to rebuild it, we can perhaps claim some credit for its present exquisite beauty.

"But these early quarrels are long buried," she said. "What is more important is that our shared language, traditions and history have given us a common vision of what is just and right."

She said that, like the U.S. "Britain, too, has undergone many changes."

"While maintaining the closest links with the Commonwealth and the United States, Britain has become a member of the European communities and this gives us yet another opportunity to work through a wider grouping for the benefit of mankind."

Later, the queen visited Arlington National Cemetery with the prince and placed a huge wreath of red roses on the tomb of the unknowns. A 21-gun salute greeted her arrival and another 21 gun salute marked her departure from the cemetery.

At the Lincoln Memorial, the queen was relaxed and smiled and stopped repeatedly to talk to members of the crowd gathered behind rope barricades along the steps leading to the memorial.

The queen's motorcade was nearly swept up in a cops-and-robbers chase after she landed at Andrews Air Force Base near Washington.

Police said a patrol car was chasing Howard Barnes, one of three men suspected of robbing a nearby bank, when Barnes rammed the police car, fled on foot and jumped a fence at the air base.

Detective Lloyd Lipkey fired two shots, apparently hitting Barnes once, but the fugitive disappeared into the base where he was later arrested.

United States officials opened the doors of the White House kitchens to reporters Wednesday to watch chef Henry Haller, his cooks and bakers prepare a private lunch for the queen and the state dinner for more than 200 guests in the Rose Garden Wednesday night.

Haller said the saddles of veal for the dinner cost $1,000.

The luncheon menu included cold cucumber soup, crepes filled with diced capon and mushrooms, spinach salad and a dessert, champagne mousse with frosted seedless grapes.

Suarez forms government

MADRID (Reuter) — Prime Minister Adolfo Suarez Wednesday night formed a new government with a centre-right Christian Democratic tinge to lead Spain to general elections expected next year.

He kept seven from the outgoing cabinet, including four military ministers, and brought in 10 new ones, including Foreign Minister Marcelino Oreja.

Oreja, 40, at present foreign undersecretary succeeds Jose Maria de zereilza. Oreja is considered the most liberal of the new comers.

A Christian Democrat, he is expected to maintain the impetus of Spain's campaign for entry into the European Common Market launched by Areilza.

Areilza, Interior Minister Manuel Fraga and two other prominent liberals in the outgoing government refused to serve under the 43-year-old prime minister, who was appointed five days ago.

They objected to his inexperience, his rise to power from within Gen. Franco's state party, the National Movement, and his close links with members of the Roman Catholic lay organization Opus De .

Many had a background in finance, indicating Suarez' preoccupation with Spain's economic problems, principally soaring inflation.

Loan avoided sanctions

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says that the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce loaned $2 million in 1970 to a company in which Angus Ogilvy, husband of Princess Alexandra, was one of the principals, enabling him and two business associates to invest in a copper mine in Rhodesia.

Evidence obtained in 1974 in a British government investigation shows that O. W. Lacey, then manager of the Commerce office in London, was aware that the loan made through the bank's Nassau subsidiary was for an investment in Rhodesia, the newspaper says in a London story.

It says the investigation shows that by borrowing the money from the Commerce— of which Ogilvy, whose wife is a cousin of the Queen, is a director, Ogilvy and his two associates avoided British sanctions preventing funds from being channelled to Rhodesia from Britain.

Commerce officials in Toronto refused to give details of the loan but said its understanding was that it was for investment in South Africa, The Globe and Mail says.

$1,000, jail for motorist

NANAIMO — A Nanaimo man, Eli Wayne Bridden, 26, Wednesday was sentenced to three months in jail and fined $1,000 after pleading guilty in provincial court to a series of driving offences.

Bridden was charged June 26 with hit-and-run and driving while under suspension. Then, on June 28, he was charged with driving with a blood alcohol reading of more than .08 per cent and driving while under suspension.

In passing sentence, Judge Stan Wardill told Bridden that to the best of his calculations, Bridden has amassed a total of 124 demerit points on his driving record.

"You have no competition as the worst driving record I have ever seen," the judge said.

Court was told that when the offences were committed last fall, Bridden was already under suspension from driving and on probation from an earlier charge of impaired driving in Parksville.

Wardill sentenced Bridden to three months in jail for the over-.08 charge, placed him on probation for two years for the first charge of driving while prohibited, fined him $500 for the hit-and-run and another $500 for the second driving-while-prohibited charge.

Ferry fares

"Sometimes there can be a fine line between economic logic and greed," he continued. "Greed has sounded the death knell of individuals and civilizations throughout history. Regrettably, this is not a fairy tale, it's very real — it's a true story of Vancouver Island, the Gulf Islands and the Sechelt Peninsula."

The transport minister has said, despite reports to the contrary, that he will not consider rolling back the fares which doubled on June 1.

The rates have been blamed for a drastically reduced tourist trade and business difficulties on Vancouver Island since then.

Your Good Health

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My son, 32 years old, was rushed to the hospital last year near death in a reaction to a bee sting on his arm. Immediate treatment saved his life, and he's carried a kit with him in case he is ever stung again and is out of reach of a hospital.

It has been suggested that he be desensitized and I'm wondering about the effects of this treatment. He was told it is a procedure that takes over a year. What are your thoughts on this? —C.Y.

It is a good idea — for some. Desensitization reduces reaction to stings by about 90 per cent.

The procedure is long, and may, in fact, have to be continued for the rest of his life.

Whether he undertakes this or not would depend on his potential exposure to bites. If he is an outdoor person — a gardener, for example, or anyone who works out of doors — it would be best to have the treatment.

As an adult, and with the kit available, he might not want to have the treatment. If not, then care to avoid insects is his only other alternative. He should be wary of flowers, and not use fragrant cosmetics, as hair dressings and lotions. He should avoid bright clothing on sunny days.

Reaction may be immediate or occur within 30 minutes of the sting, hence he should use the kit promptly when stung.

Knowing the culprit involved is important in desensitization — whether hornet, bee, wasp or yellow jacket.

Your son should consult your city health department for advice on removal of any nests or hives that may be on his property. He should have work of removal, though, someone else do the actual Officials insist problem has nothing to do with chemical tests at Dugway, where 4,500 sheep died in March, 1968, during nerve gas tests.

Pregnant women top flu priority

OTTAWA (CP) — Pregnant women should be given top priority in receiving swine flu vaccinations, the national committee on immunizing agents said in a report prepared for presentation to Health Minister Marc Lalonde.

The 11-member committee of Canadian medical specialists said pregnant women have a greater chance of catching swine flu than other women, said Dr. John Abbatt, director general for the Laboratory Centre for Disease Control.

The committee also recommended that a double vaccine for swine flu and Victoria A strain flu be given first to people with chronic respiratory disease or heart disease, then to people over 65.

Lalonde said earlier the vaccination also would be available to people between 20 and 50 with first priority given to people in essential community services.

However, the committee report said people under 20 might be considered for vaccination because the available vaccines will be more highly refined than was previously thought and therefore less likely to cause severe adverse reactions.

Initially, the committee did not recommend the vaccination for children under 16. Crude vaccine can bring on fever and convulsions in children, Abbatt said.

The exact age limit for young people receiving swine flu vaccine cannot be determined until the committee knows the results of clinical tests now under way.

The committee also needs more information on the exact dosages required for effective immunization, Abbatt said.

He said tests are being conducted on army personnel and results are expected by the end of July.

He said 11.5 to 12 million doses are needed by September.

"Each province is responsible for conducting its own immunization program," Abbatt said.

Lalonde said earlier the total cost of the vaccine would be about $9 million.

The swine strain of influenza was identified in four men at Fort Dix, N.J., last February. One man died.

Swine flu killed about 20 million persons in an 1919-1920 epidemic.

Tangled with plane but jumped again

LONDON (UPI) — Skydiver Graham Jacobs, 18 and on his third jump, got a rude shock when his parachute caught the rear wheel of the plane during a military "adventure course" exercise in southwestern England.

The light aircraft, with Jacobs in tow, nosedived from 2,500 to 900 feet before pilot Richard Brooks regained control. Brooks circled the field for 45 minutes while Jacobs wriggled out of his harness and landed safely on his reserve chute.

"It was very low for a parachute jump. Normally the minimum is about 1,000 feet," Brooks said. "But he did the right things in the right order and he lived."

"He just kept apologizing for making a bad exit," said Lieut Alex Manning, who jumped before Jacobs and was waiting for him on the ground. "We were all laughing with relief."

Afterwards Jacobs, a naval air mechanic, went up and jumped again.

Police tally losses

REGINA (CP) — Regina police reported Wednesday that $149,900 in thefts and damage occurred during their 19-hour strike last week.

The estimate does not include numerous cases of minor theft and lesser instances of wilful damage.

Property damage totalled $39,850, mostly at a drive-in restaurant wrecked by teenagers.

The largest of the $110,050 in thefts was $5,000 in cash and $55,000 in cheques taken from a supermarket safe. A fur store was robbed of $18,000 in fur coats.

4 anarchists break prison

BERLIN (UPI) — Four women terrorists overpowered their guards in a West Berlin prison Wednesday and escaped by climbing over a 16-foot wall using knotted sheets.

One of them was Inge Viett, a 32-year-old former kindergarten teacher whose release was demanded last week by pro-Palestinian hijackers in Uganda.

Police set up special controls at border crossing into East Germany as they searched the walled-in city.

West Berlin Deputy Mayor Hermann Oxfort told reporters the four urban guerrillas, armed with a pistol and pipes ripped from a toilet, locked two guards in the library of West Berlin's Lehrter prison for women.

He said they scaled the wall and escaped in a waiting getaway car, scattering spikes on the street to cut the tires of pursuers.

"This is a most extraordinary event," Oxfort said. "Nothing quite like this has ever happened in Germany before."

He could not explain how the women got out of their cells.

Doctor says cancer is epidemic in state

HARRISBURG, Pennsylvania (UPI) — A research scientist Wednesday said cancer has reached epidemic stages in Pennsylvania and that environmental factors, including radiation, may be the main causes.

Dr. Rosalie Bertell also told the house mines and energy management committee the problem may be more serious than anyone realizes because statistics on the disease in Pennsylvania are inadequate.

Dr. Bertell, a senior cancer research scientist at the Roswell Park Memorial Institute in Buffalo, N.Y., testified at a committee hearing on nuclear power plant safety.

She said Pennsylvania should wait until scientists know more about the relationship between cancer and environmental factors, such as pollution and radiation, before making further commitments to nuclear power.

"There is a cancer epidemic in Pennsylvania," she said, citing state health department statistics which show the cancer death rate increased in 42 of the 67 counties between 1965-69 and 1974.

Dr. Bertell said she defined a cancer epidemic as the point at which the cancer rate increases sufficiently to cause alarm. She said the increases in the Pennsylvania study meet her criteria.

Skagit N-plant 'quake-safe'

SEATTLE (AP) — The Puget Sound Power and Light Co. Wednesday reaffirmed its earlier testimony that earthquakes will not be hazardous to two nuclear power plants it plans to build near Sedro Wooley.

Utility witnesses, testifying before a federal atomic-safety and licensing board, challenged earlier arguments that potentially dangerous faults exist in the Skagit Valley near the planned site.

Merlyn J. Adair, chief geologist for Bechtel Corp., designer of the nuclear project, told the board that additional seismic investigation requested by the board has confirmed conclusions "that the Skagit site is geologically and seismologically suitable for construction and operation of the proposed nuclear power facility."

Testimony was scheduled to continue through Saturday, but the absence of counsel for opponents of the project may cut the hearing short.

After the hearing, the board will decide whether Puget Power will receive a limited work authorization, which would permit work preliminary to construction of the project.

Adair estimated that the maximum earthquake that could occur at the plant site would have an intensity of 7 on the Richter scale. He saiud the two plants would be designed to withstand a quake with an intensity of 8.

Ticklish problem

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Tennessee Valley Authority has run into a ticklish situation over the use of feathers to check for air leaks at its nuclear power plant at Brosn's Ferry, Alabama.

The plant has been closed since March 22, 1975 when a fire ignited by a candle used to check air leaks destroyed cables from a control room to two of the plant's three reactors.

Following the fire, TVA officials said feathers, ultrasonic detectors and soap solutions would be used to check for air leaks in the future.

William Garner, a lawyer trying to prevent the nuclear power plant from reopening, petitioned the atomic safety and licensing board wanting to know all about the feathers.

Garner's questions included:

- How will the feather be tested for dryness and fluffiness and to see if it is in good condition?
- Will the feather be real or artificial? If artificial, who manufactures it; if real, will it come from a domestic or foreign bird?
- Give the name, breed, sex and part of the body from which the feather will be plucked.

To smoke or not to smoke.

There's a good chance that lately you've been giving some thought to smoking. Many people are.

The question is, what are you going to do about it? If you've never smoked, or if you've quit smoking, we're not urging you to start. But if you're a smoker who's not ready to give up the enjoyment you get from smoking, we'd like to call your attention to Vantage.

Vantage gives you the taste you want. The unique Vantage filter, which is based on a new design concept, lets the full, rich flavour of Virginia tobaccos come through. Vantage gives you so much of what you want in a cigarette with a lot less of what you don't want.

And Vantage draws easily. You don't have to puff hard pulling the smoke through so that the joy of smoking is lost.

If all this makes sense to you, there's every reason to consider the new cigarette called Vantage.

Why not try a pack.

Warning: Health and Welfare Canada advises that danger to health increases with amount smoked—avoid inhaling. 11 mg. "tar" 0.8 mg. nicotine.

No backsliding here

ONTARIO'S SEAT BELT LAW is not being obeyed to the extent it was six months ago. Buckling up was made mandatory in January and a study shows a drop in compliance from 75 per cent in February to 51 per cent in June. This is lap belt use. With shoulderstraps the decline is from 65 to 36 per cent.

The study was made by the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety, a U.S. research organization which sent its spotters to Ontario because the province is the only jurisdiction in North America that has passed seat belt legislation.

The findings are based on 18,100 checks in and around Ottawa, Toronto and Windsor. And the conclusion reached by Leon Robertson, the institute's "senior behavioral scientist," is: "Although belt use laws initially have some effect on the actual use and the vehicle occupant death rate, they are clearly not a panacea."

Mr. Robertson goes on to suggest that passive restraints, such as air bags built into cars that inflate on collision impact, would be a more logical approach than laws directed at changing the behavior of large numbers of individuals.

He may have a point but it shouldn't be allowed to deflate B.C.'s plans for a seat belt law which was introduced at the recent session of the legislature but is still to be debated, hopefully in the fall with early implementation.

As the Toronto Globe and Mail says, Mr. Robertson is being overly hasty in dismissing compulsory seat belt use because some of the early impact of the Ontario law has slackened: "With all due respects to anyone who can be described as a senior behavioral scientist, we think Mr. Robertson is in too much of a rush to jump to the next prospect for a panacea."

Seat belts have proven their worth and laws on use of them have been made to stick elsewhere.

B.C. should be concentrating on ways of enforcement to avoid the backsliding that Ontario is experiencing.

With seat belt use a law of the province there should be constant reminders by police, as the Toronto newspaper is calling for in Ontario, "that we have passed beyond the stage of accommodating personal preferences in these matters."

The reminders should be made, in no uncertain terms, from the day a belt law comes into effect. The government is making no mistake in its move towards mandatory belt use but it must show at all times that it means what it says.

Remarkable coincidence

EXPENDITURE for the British Columbia ferries, said Finance Minister Evan Wolfe's budget speech in March, "is reduced by $39 million to $59 million, of which $34 million will provide for the operating and capital expenditures for three months to July 1, 1976, when the ferry system will become a crown corporation. A total of $25 million is provided to cover the expected operating deficit of the new corporation for the remainder of the fiscal year."

This statement (coming after a report by Price Waterhouse Associates at the beginning of the year that the ferries likely would have an operating deficit for the 1976-77 year of $59 million) seemed to explain why this fiscal year's subsidy to the new corporation would be $25 million.

But no, according to Transport Minister Jack Davis, it was nothing so simple.

Commenting on June 8 on the province's planned continuing subsidization of the ferries, the Colonist noted that the bill to establish the corporation said that an Annual Highway Equivalent Subsidy could be paid to the corporation which in the opinion of the cabinet would be substantially equivalent to the cost of maintaining and the annual amortization of the capital cost of lengths and classes of highways in the province deemed substantially equivalent to the ferry routes, calculated in accordance with a formula to be approved by the cabinet.

One was tempted to suspect, we wrote, that the cabinet might pick a figure and work back from there to get its formula and highway equivalents.

But we should not have harbored such notion. In a letter to the editor published Wednesday, Mr. Davis informed us that the B.C. ferry routes excluding the Prince Rupert run total 230 miles, and according to the highways department the annual cost of building and maintaining 230 miles of standard two-lane Trans-Canada highway is $25 million—"This is where we got the $25 million from."

Actually, we were thinking of future years, though, years when the ferry corporation will be operating for 12 months, not nine months. Can Mr. Davis find 230-mile stretches of classes of highway that cost a little more?

Ah well, this comes to us from the same man who reasons that a ferry ride saves people $4 that they would spend for fuel used in two hours on the highway, including $1.50 in taxes; that ferry users are getting a bargain because of the scenery, and — non-sequitur to end them all — that the average wage on the ferries is $10 an hour and $10 is the charge for transporting a single car. So what?

Men who want to be Number Two

By MARK FRANKLAND from Washington

Question. What do the following five men have in common: Alben Barkley, Henry Wallace, John Garner, Charles Curtis, and Charles Dawes? Answer. They were all vice-presidents of the United States within the last 50 years.

Students of American history agree that the most striking thing about vice-presidents is their forgetability. There is something about the office that destroys political promise. A vice-president, quite a glorious figure beside his president on Inauguration Day, ends up as often as not as an administration's uninvited guest.

Yet at this time of year, with both political parties due to nominate their presidential and vice-presidential candidates in a few weeks, politicians who till now have appeared of normal ambition and sense begin to be tempted by the vice-presidency.

It is not a sign of complete foolishness on their part. In this century six out of 13 presidents were previously vice-presidents. The odds of a vice-president becoming president, according to Harvard University's Institute of Politics, are now one to two.

And within the last 30 years the succession rate has been better still. Out of six presidents, four (Truman, Nixon, Johnson and Ford) had been vice-presidents. However, three of them succeeded in unusual circumstances: Harry Truman after President Roosevelt's death, Lyndon Johnson after the assassination of John Kennedy and, most unusual of all, Gerald Ford after the resignation of Nixon.

It is the possibility, seldom spoken of openly, that something will happen to the president that is the real basis of a modern vice-president's hopes. The old hopefulness about the office was that it gave a man a chance to make a name for himself and so eventually to stand for the presidency itself.

Richard Nixon's two terms as vice-president to President Eisenhower were an example of that. But it is the only example in this century. The two earlier vice-presidents who became president (Theodore Roosevelt and Calvin Coolidge) first succeeded presidents who died in office, although they later went on to win their party's presidential nomination.

It has been more common for the vice-presidency to destroy a man's chances of getting to the White House. Senator Hubert Humphrey is a case in point.

He was Lyndon Johnson's vice-president from 1964 to 1968. Humphrey recalls in his recent autobiography (The Autobiography of a Public Man) that Johnson warned him of the dangers of the vice-presidency. The president and the vice-president, Johnson said, seldom got on well and the vice-president almost always wound up feeling ignored and even ridiculed.

Johnson should have known, for even this overbearing, aggressive Texan seemed reduced to ghostlike proportions when he was Kennedy's vice-president.

The vice-president has usually been picked for the most obvious of political reasons. He is supposed to give strength to the presidential ticket by complementing the president's political qualities. Within either party a presidential candidate from a northern industrial state will look for a running mate in, say the West or the South. A rather conservative president might try to get a man of slightly more liberal views.

Thus Nixon chose as his vice-president the governor of Maryland, Spiro Agnew, a politician of little national fame and even then a bit dubious because Maryland politics are not of the cleanest. But Nixon's electoral strategy was based on the belief that he could win the votes of independents and Democrats in the South, and Maryland is on the fringes of the South.

Jimmy Carter, the almost certain Democratic candidate this year, also has an obvious regional problem. His worst primary showing has been in the West. Senator Frank Church of Idaho (who is interested in the vice-presidency) and Governor Jerry Brown of California (who probably isn't) would make good running mates, according to this theory of regional balance.

It is however not proven that balancing tickets in this way has much effect on the voters. It is probably more important in keeping contented the party activists, whose job on election day is of course to get out the voters.

Another consideration has become of as great or greater importance in recent years: the need for a vice-president who is truly qualified to succeed to the presidency in the case of death or disaster striking the White House. Unexpected successors have for the most part been successes in the last 30 years. Truman, the not very well known senator from Missouri, became a great president after succeeding one of the very greatest.

Lyndon Johnson was in many ways more effective, at least where reform legislation was concerned, than the star-like John Kennedy. Only Nixon's choices have been questionable: Agnew forced to resign even before his master, and Gerald Ford, a decent man but chosen by Nixon partly at least in the hope that he would not be considered proper presidential material.

It is now thought that the choice should be far more systemized in order to avoid having another Agnew or Eagleton (Senator Thomas Eagleton, chosen by Senator George McGovern as his running mate on the Democratic ticket four years ago turned out to have undergone electric shock treatment at an earlier period in his life. This was thought sufficient to disqualify him and with great embarrassment Sargent Shriver was brought in to replace him).

President Ford has suggested that the FBI provide studies of all possible candidates of both parties. Others dislike the police state smell of this proposal. The Harvard Institute of Politics has just suggested that the party conventions themselves should spend more time deliberating on who the vice-president should be.

But the Democratic choice this year is really going to be made by one man, Jimmy Carter. He has women and blacks on his list of possibles as well as more obvious names like Church and Brown. It is obviously going to be a very "political" choice, but the Republicans' could be even more so.

Whether Ford or Reagan wins the Republican nomination they are going to need all the help possible in the general election (present polls say Carter stands to beat both quite easily) so the temptation just to pick a strong regional candidate is strong.

League has growing strength

By RICHARD JACKSON

The Voice of Canada League, what is it?

It is a small, Ottawa-based group of independent businessmen.

With its main strength in Ontario, it has an increasing membership in the West and the Maritimes, and is not without representation even in Quebec.

Most of all, it is not some here - today - gone - tomorrow organization, but has been around for 15 years, has run at least one candidate in the last federal election, and is increasingly well-financed.

Its official spokesman is Stanley Petrie, an Ottawa insurance agent who so far has said little publicly beyond the basic fact that the league was founded initially "to contend with problems started with bilingualism and the increasing domination by Quebec of the federal government establishment."

He has added that the league has sought to counter the "lack of balance in regional influence on federal policy-making which results from the failure of both the Liberals and Progressive-Conservatives to stand up to Quebec."

In other words, the league contends that because Quebec votes federally pretty well as a bloc — even when it deserted the Liberals in the 1958 election and gave John Diefenbaker's Conservatives 50 seats — both major parties go to almost any extreme to win it. And Quebec well knows it.

In comparison, the two parties take the rest of Canada more or less for granted.

Few Canadians — far too few from the viewpoint of the league — were aware of the Voice of Canada until the blow-up over bilingualism in commercial aviation and the grounding of aircraft in protest against the use of two languages in the control towers of Quebec — and later, in the national capital — making the skies less safe.

For something in excess of $10,000 — indicating at least some substantial measure of financial support — the league ran two full-page advertisements, one in the Toronto Globe and Mail, the other in The Ottawa Journal.

They were denounced in Parliament by Anthony Abbott, Liberal MP for Mississauga, son of former Liberal Finance Minister Douglas (Grabbit) Abbott, as viciously racist.

At the same time, Conservative Leader Joe Clark scored off an almost equally large advertisement placed in far more newspapers by Transport Minister Otto Lang, supposedly presenting the "other side" of the bilingual-air-safety dispute as disruptive and enflaming.

What did the league say in its ad?

Essentially this:

The government was in "hysterical pursuit of bilingualism at any price."

It asked the question: "Which is more important: the cultural rights of 330 French-speaking Quebec air controllers or the safety of the lives of millions of Canadians and foreign visitors?"

It further asked: "Why should the government be so anxious to spare the lives of murderers — even the murderers of the men who stand between society and chaos — when they are so ready to sacrifice the lives of innocent Canadians in pursuit of a cultural fantasy?"

Finally, it demanded that with the cost of bilingualism running at an annual $500 million — nobody actually knows the real total and the government refuses to put a figure on it — a national referendum be held on the language issue.

But the ad itself, "viciously racist?"

Appearing in The Globe and Mail and The Ottawa Journal? These are racist papers?

And the league?

This newsman, through various channels, was able to sit in and cover an executive session of the league, held on a Sunday afternoon in Ottawa's posh Talisman Hotel and called to organize and finance the campaign of a candidate nominated to run in the '74 federal election.

The executive members were all small businessmen: one a suburban Westboro merchant, another a midtown insurance broker, a third a Carleton Place industrial manager, a fourth a Kingston public servant. They were all in that mould.

But they had a problem: no financing adequate even to field one candidate.

So tight was the budget that even a $25 donation was a windfall.

But they ran their man, a young, good-looking Ottawa lawyer who conducted a low-key, polite and entirely unexciting campaign in Ottawa West.

Yes, he said he represented the Voice of Canada League, and was concerned about bilingualism.

But so were the New Democratic, Conservative and even the Liberal candidates similarly concerned, and there wasn't much to go on except party loyalties, and who were these Voice of Canada people?

Not racists, that's certain. No more so, on the basis of that campaign than the other candidates. The league ran fourth, ahead only of the Communist and a couple of independents.

They'll try again. Next time in far more ridings than just Ottawa West.

Washington Calling

Puerto Rican lessons

By MARQUIS CHILDS

So much of the news is a commodity whipped up by the media themselves. That was true of a lot of the coverage of the 30 primaries reported in the old tradition of "he's up, he's down," with only a fraction of the electorate concerned enough to vote.

But the prize example of synthetic news was President Ford's economic summit in Puerto Rico. As image-building by way of television it served his purposes. Even as first announced, the possibility of any tangible achievement was heavily discounted and no one therefore had reason to be disappointed.

In the choice of a site — San Juan in the full blaze of summer's heat — was an irony that must have escaped the harried heads of government. As they went from one air-conditioned conference room to another under the heaviest security on this two-day excursion, the locale meant little or nothing.

Yet they might have learned something about the problems of the Third World from this curious island commonwealth. For Puerto Rico, as a dependent of the United States, is part of a balancing act that threatens from time to time to fall apart. They might have learned, too, about the role Cuba has played in the Puerto Rican dilemma.

Fidel Castro's meddling in the relationship between Puerto Rico and the United States is one of the reasons that the proposed reopening a year ago of the Cuban-U.S. dialogue was aborted. While this was secondary to the massive Cuban intervention in Angola — there may be today as many as 15,000 Cuban troops in that former Portugese colony — it was nevertheless evidence that Castro was continuing to try to make trouble for the United States in the Caribbean.

Last September at a solidarity congress in Havana the cause was Puerto Rican independence. And although its importance was played down the Cuban radio beamed inflammatory speeches, many of them by Puerto Rican independence delegates, to the island commonwealth.

The Cubans never miss an opportunity to raise this issue at the United Nations. They are expected to do a repeat performance in August before what is known as the Committee of 24 which concerns itself with decolonization. These gestures mean little except as propaganda and as proof for Washington that Castro is determined to continue his trouble-making role.

Repeatedly in free elections the Puerto Ricans have voted down independence. In the last elections in 1972 the independence parties got only 4.5 per cent of the vote, with 85 per cent of potential voters going to the polls.

By any rational measurement independence would be the sheerest madness. In an island heavily overpopulated with no energy resources, suffering from a severe recession caused in part by the quadrupling of oil prices, cutting off the massive help provided by the United States would be a form of suicide.

Given his Marxist outlook, Castro may envisage Puerto Rico as a second Angola. Cuban troops would move in to keep order. But with Cubans themselves still rationed for many essentials, the food deficit could never be made up. The island would soon become a starving poorhouse.

As a measure of American help, out of a population of 3,000,000, 52 per cent, or 1,558,000, are on the food stamp program. More than 200,000 are on the federal aid for families with dependent children, although the monthly payment of $45 does not go far.

A determined drive to build up industry and tourism has raised per capita income to more than $2,000, according to a spokesman for the island. That income is the second-highest in Latin America, exceeded only by oil-rich Venezuela. With unemployment officially at 17 per cent and tourism falling off, it will be a struggle to sustain such a level.

Even if they had had a moment to consider it, this must all have seemed irrelevant to the heads of government. Each has his own serious political-economic problems back home and each was making sure that he got filmed by the television crew that turned up from his home base. Here were the statesmen debating with their fellows about inflation and its perils together with unemployment and the dangers if the brake is pushed down too hard on the current recovery.

Puerto Rico is in a sense part of the Third World. As such it is an object lesson in the cost of sustaining living standards at anything close to the level of the industrialized nations.

How it feels

From The Globe and Mail

Harvard Medical School has begun to add humility to the other gifts it bestows on would-be doctors, offering them a month-long course on scrubbing floors, wielding bedpans and answering the phone. The purpose, of course, is to show the students that others are as crucial to a patient's health as they are — and it's probably a good idea, as far as it goes.

But if the Harvard experiment turns out successfully, it seems a shame to cut it off there.

Surely law students would benefit equally from a month behind bars on their way to the bar — serving prisoners food, or maybe locking the occasional door. Business administration students could certainly use a refreshing dip in the secretarial pool.

And, in a world in which every man learns to respect his brother, even prospective journalists will have to get into the act. A paper-route perhaps?

Gorde Hunter

TODAY'S AGENDA shows two unrelated facts of life in our Victoria area — the dearth of tourism and acupuncture.

The influx of dollar-laden tourists has not taken place this year. The diehards relate it along the lines of the swallows failing to return to Capistrano.

The swallows do return to that rocky California coastline because the cost of living in Capistrano is still within their means. Here in Victoria, please let us be honest and call a gouge a gouge.

Let me hasten to explain the hotel, motel and restaurant owners are not grubby greedy in their approach to business. Their problems are somewhat different than the problems of like owners in Washington, Oregon, California, Utah, Colorado, etc.

The higher wages paid here once again highlight the problem of British Columbia products, services. I'm not saying the higher wage structure is the whole reason for high room rates, high price of meals, but it certainly contributes a fair share of the extra load.

The increased ferry fares have undoubtedly slowed the tourist trek and I am still optimist enough to believe the government will yet see fit to make a downward adjustment. Not much sense spending a hundred grand publicizing the joys of ferry travel while not, at the same time, making that travel more financially attractive. Throwing good money after bad.

The tourist industry is in trouble and it is in trouble simply because tourists can get far better facility rates in other areas. Victoria is well into the process of pricing itself right out of the market place. No other reason is necessary.

NOW OVER TO ACUPUNCTURE and what is, to this lay view, a failure of the much heralded acupuncture clinics both here at Vic General and over in Vancouver.

Having been closely connected with the acupuncture movement for many years, I receive almost daily reports from patients availing themselves of the new treatment centres and the reports are somewhat less than enthusiastic.

Too many claim they have not received relief through the needle program and there is no doubt the program is completely inadequate to take care of the needs of Victoria area citizens.

TO START WITH, the program is much too stilted. The clinic should be run throughout every day of every week. However, those in charge have seen fit to keep it open but three days a week, thus causing long waiting lists and what is even worse, inadequate treatment.

And I'm afraid the B.C. medical practitioners still haven't seen their way clear to giving acupuncture an honest trial. I'm afraid the present half-hearted program was agreed upon more as a sop to an insistent public than anything else. I'm afraid they entered into it in a reluctant way and have done a reluctant job.

There can not be fully competent acupuncture treatment without fully-trained personnel, and while some would have you believe a short course of say, two or three months, is enough to give a medical doctor the skills of acupuncture, this is far from the truth.

Skilled acupuncturists from the Orient took years of training to reach their peak efficiency and this experiment in British Columbia has not availed itself enough of these experts.

British Columbia, for instance, would be wise to embark on a program such as they have in Ontario — where the Ontario College of Physicians and Surgeons conducts examinations, written and oral, for the licensing of acupuncture practitioners.

MANY STATES south of the line have gone the same route, resulting in better and more readily available acupuncture treatment. The Ontario exams, incidentally, are tough exams and only the best qualified personnel are able to gain passing marks and accreditation. In other words, British Columbia could easily make sure the field wouldn't become populated with the half-trained or out-and-out quacks.

The department of health, I'm sure, thought it was making an honest effort here in B.C., but I would suggest to the minister, Bob McClelland, the honest effort needs a complete overhaul.

AS FOR THE AVAILABILITY of acupuncture treatment from other than the clinic, a constant question to this department, yes, there are other avenues.

I know of one fully accredited acupuncturist who has had marked success in his work. For those interested, a phone call to my office will get the necessary particulars.

But isn't it a dreary note in this supposedly enlightened society, that we have to go through such channels in order to get proper treatment? British Columbia is still dragging its butt in the field of acupuncture healing.

If you ever hear that I jumped into a jump suit, don't believe it. I was pushed.

This has to be the Brand X of the fashion industry.

There are only six women in this country who look well in jump suits. Five of them are terminal and the other was sired by a Xerox machine.

Out of sheer curiosity, I was rummaging through a rack of them when a saleswoman approached and asked, "Which size are you? 12? 14? 16?."

"Yes," I said.

"Which?" she pursued.

"All three. My bust is a 12, my waist a 14 and my hips 16."

"Try the 14," she said dryly. "The fitting room is behind better dresses."

The fitting room was something I had never seen before. It was a community deal . . . a large room with 16 mirrors on the wall, a rack in the centre to hang discards and a woman by the door to make sure you didn't wear out any more than you wore in.

A fitting room to me has always been like a confessional — where my body and my contrition take up the entire room.

There is no room for anyone else. I looked around. All eyes seemed to be focused on one woman. She weighed about six pounds and was trying on a jump suit . . . one of the six women mentioned above. It slid on easily, up over her hips and onto her arms. I winced as she distributed the cloth left over around her waist.

I looked at the crowd who could not take their eyes off her. I had seen that look of resentment and pain on only one other occasion. It was a Charlton Heston movie just before the door slid back between the Christians and the lions.

Inching closer, I whispered, "Lady, you better get out of here before they tear you to shreds."

It was my turn. For 15 minutes, I tugged and inched my way into the jump suit and looked into the mirror. The chest was disguised as a back, the stomach strained at the buttons, the legs were numb without circulation and the hems swirled around the floor.

"How do you . . ."

"You get a carton of water pills with every suit," offered the salesperson.

I didn't buy the jump suit, but what the heck. For a while seven women forgot about the Panama Canal.

"And remember, just because she calls you Mr. President, you don't call her Mrs. Queen."

West Indians who flocked to Britain returning home

By LLOYD TIMBERLAKE of Reuter from London

Many of the West Indians who came to Britain to seek their fortune are going home — if they can afford the plane fare.

In the late 1950s and early 1960s, tens of thousands of young West Indians were recruited for a booming British economy to take jobs that Britons usually didn't want, on the buses and subways or sweeping the streets.

Now the boom has subsided and many migrants find themselves with debts, mortgages, children and perhaps without even the low-paying jobs they once had.

Emigration of West Indians began to overtake immigration around the turn of the decade. Between 1971 and 1973, 9,000 West Indians came to Britain but 14,000 left, mostly for the islands. In 1974, the excess of departures over arrivals was 2,000.

In 1975, a bad economic year for Britain, arrivals topped departures by 800 but most community leaders see this as reflecting not so much a change of heart as the fact that would-be emigrants could not raise the air fare home.

Many island countries have recruitment schemes to entice skilled West Indians home. The most aggressive, perhaps, is Guyana, a country bigger than Britain with a population of less than one million and with a government that wants to develop its mineral-rich interior.

The Guyanan High Commission has not released statistics of its recruitment program, but a West Indian newspaper editor said it has been most successful.

Apart from Guyanans it has attracted "small islanders" from such places at St. Kitts, St. Lucia and Antigua who had taken jobs in the depressed factories of northern cities like Birmingham.

One young restaurant worker signing up for his family said:

"I think I have a better chance of making it out there. There seems to be a kind of barrier here. It comes down when you have gone a certain distance, and you can't get any further."

The owner of a restaurant, also a Guyana-bound West Indian, said he was leaving because British tax laws were hard on small businessmen.

West Indians are not the only people leaving Britain. From 1964 to 1975, 2.3 million people migrated to Britain, but 2.8 million left, nearly 30 per cent of them headed for Australia.

Among the West Indians, reasons for leaving vary.

A spokesman for the Guyanan High Commission said most of their applicants were "mature, middle-aged people who had always intended to go back."

But many are leaving poor and bitter. A recent report to Parliament by the North London-based West Indian Leadership Committee said:

"The majority of West Indian immigrants came to Britain on British passports which they believed confirmed their British identity. They soon discovered, however, that the mere possession of British passports and more obvious trappings of their British personality, i.e. language, religion, values, were not sufficient to counteract the disadvantages of a black skin."

Government statistics show that over the period 1969-73, 34,000 immigrants arrived from the West Indies and 40,000 emigrants left for the West Indies.

Over the same period, 256,000 people, mostly of Asian origin, arrived from African Commonwealth countries and the Indian subcontinent and 128,000 left for those areas.

Many Asian immigrants are well-educated and experienced in running small businesses. In fact, it was their dominating position as the retailers of Uganda, Tanzania and Kenya that prompted their expulsion from these countries. These new arrivals were after the same jobs and homes as the West Indians.

For years right-wing opponents of immigration such as Member of Parliament Enoch Powell have urged the governemnt to pay the fares of non-European immigrants who want to return home.

Ironically, some West Indian community leaders are demanding the same thing.

Guyana is even putting it into practice, offering job contracts of from three to eight years and paying fares and transport for household goods. But Guyana wants only skilled people.

Thus many immigrants feel trapped. As one of Jamaican origin said: "Jamaica is just like Britain now. They don't want the poor people any more."

To the editor

To be considered for publication in entirety or in part, letters to the editor should be on subjects of general interest. Preference will be given to those that are brief and to the point. Pen-names will be used, if requested, but all letters must be signed by the writer whose address also must be included.

Quebec racism

It's about time the provinces officially opposed the out-and-out racism of Quebec and its attempt to control Canada via their Liberal Party, so called.

Numerous impositions have been forced on the rest of Canada by this racist consortium and the latest is the attempt to force out English, the acknowledged international language of the air, and seriously hybridise it with French; which can only ultimately work to Canada's immense disadvantage.

Another instance of this racism is that of actually making French the only legal language in Quebec and the attempt to force English out of their schools — and this in a supposedly free country and which the Liberal federal government allows them to illegally do, as it is obviously unconstitutional.

They are thus disgustingly using the freedom the British granted them to take away the freedom of the rest of Canada.

Reliance

This letter is for the air traffic controllers and the pilots of the planes in our skies. Please do not sacrifice the safety of air travel in order to comply with a vicious and irresponsible order by our government. You pilots and controllers are all that stand between the passengers in your care, and terror. It is our lives too. We buy our tickets and place ourselves in your hands. We travel over the vast continent looking down on frozen land and feel secure knowing we have competent pilots and controllers to bring us safely home, despite fog or snow etc. If you feel it is not safe to have another language used in your work, then stand up and be counted. The people in the country stand behind you all the way. We were disappointed when you called off the strike in June. You were swayed by the unctuous rhetoric of government officials who have other interests in their minds.

You are the experts and you know what is dangerous and what isn't. It is your responsibility to follow what is right for the safety of yourselves and your passengers. A tragedy causing death to your passengers who entrust themselves to your care will be solely your responsibility.

Please do not be bamboozled into any agreement that you know to be a risk. We, the travelling public, rely on you.

MRS. E. J. ROBERTSON,
3503 Boulton Rd.,
Calgary, Alta.

Protest

We have addressed the following letter to Mr. Ian Gray, CPAir president, with copies to Transport Minister Otto Lang and Mr. Ken Maley, CALPA president. We feel that any air carrier that openly distrusts its pilots' judgment to the extent of taking legal action against them, leaves itself wide open to distrust.

As longtime clients of your airline we wish to state our present position. We have always elected to fly CPAir primarily for convenience and safety's sake. We consider your pilots were fully justified in refusing to fly under conditions they considered unsafe. They had nothing to gain personally.

We therefore deplore the legal action you are taking against them, for this implies either that you have no faith in their judgment, or that passenger safety is not your prime concern. We find either premise highly disturbing.

So until the government comes to its senses and sticks to the one-language-code, and you decide to back up your pilots' decisions, we will prudently depart via Seattle. Meanwhile we have no further use for our charge account card, which we herewith enclose.

FRIEDA AND
R. J. KERFOOT,
6244 Rodolph Rd.,
Victoria.

Precedent?

I feel the time has come for the people of Victoria to complain about the 'don't care" attitude of our mayor and city council, regarding the incompetent way in which they are handling reports given to them by concerned citizens.

The report I am referring to was one sent in by me on behalf of the people of Driftwood Courts on Irma Street, regarding the erection of an unattractive building to house pigeons. This building is placed behind the homes of the Driftwood Court residents. The building inspectors office was informed that no permit had been given, nevertheless, a permit was issued without an inspection of the pigeon house.

Now, this creates a precedent, so now I am of the opinion that if this is not rectified, anyone can go ahead and build anything, anywhere, anytime, and defy the city to do anything about it. For, if the city inspectors objected to anyone putting up a building, the person could always refer to Irma Street and use this as an argument against the city, and believe me, that person, whoever he may be, would have 30 Driftwood Court residents to help support the argument.

I do hope that through your paper, we can make the people of Victoria realize that unless strict action is taken and taken soon, this city is doomed. For once decay is allowed to set in, it takes no time at all for it to spread all over.

JAMES ALCORN,
203-3160 Irma St.,
Victoria.

No time

The air controllers and pilots appealing for safety in our skies have seen their words "twisted by rogues to make a trap for fools". Rene Levesque and the federal government have again made the issue one of bilingualism, when this is not the case at all.

A captain of Royal Dutch Airlines recently explained to me the absolute necessity of all pilots, taking off or landing at international airports, knowing the location of all other aircraft and what they will be doing. They listen carefully to all transmissions between pilots and tower. Thus the issue is not that one pilot understands an air controller, but that all pilots in the vicinity also understand the exchange and any instructions given. There is no time for translations or misinterpretations, hence the telegraphic air code spoken by all commercial pilots in the international language. There is no pilot of Air France who does not understand this lingua franca of the air, contrary to what has been inferred by some of the propaganda coming out of Ottawa and Quebec.

The issue is not concerned with private pilots of light aircraft, flying out of minor airfields. There may be some of the latter who cannot understand instructions from an air controller in English, but there can be no Francophone pilot of any of our major airlines who is not fully at home with it, and who does not use it daily.

If charges of racism are to be levied, let them be brought against Levesque, the federal government and their henchmen. They have, deliberately, and for their own ends, stirred up the bilingualism issue and aroused the hatred of the rest of Canada against our Canadian Frenchmen, most of whom are as concerned with air safety as the rest of us.

They are despicable men who hope to split this country in the next decade.

PROVINCIAL COURT

A fine of $3,500 and a two-year term of probation were imposed Wednesday in Victoria provincial court by Judge F. S. Green against a former Victoria area resident who stole $7,579 from his employer over a 17-month period in 1974 and 1975.

Green said he decided against a jail sentence for Wayne Arthur Bryan, 33, now of Mayne Island, with "the greatest of hesitation" because of inequity between sentences for Bryan and some who "are less fortunate."

The judge also noted a presentence report did not recommend jail and prosecutor Nicholas Lang did not oppose the report. Most important, said Green, a jail term could "wreck" Bryan's family and present business, a store.

Bryan pleaded May 31 to a charge of theft in Esquimalt between May, 1974, and October, 1975, when he worked in the produce department at W. H. Malkin Ltd., 846 Viewfield.

Prosecutor Trudi Brown said then that Bryan gave one invoice to cash customers who bought produce and a second one for a smaller amount went to the company, with Bryan "pocketing the balance."

Defence lawyer Kenneth Murphy said the $7,579 was not used to buy the Mayne Island store and had been repaid in full to Malkin's. Bryan was given until Oct. 1 to pay the $3,500 fine.

"Wanton acts of physical violence" are an increasing worry, Green said in the case of Rick Cordick, 19, of 1738 Newton, who pleaded guilty to a Saanich charge of assault causing bodily harm June 12.

Cordick became unhappy about the actions of another driver on Douglas late that day, followed him to a service station, punched him to the ground and kicked him. The other driver suffered a bloody nose and a broken tooth.

Cordick told Green it "looked as if" the other driver was going to hit Cordick "so I hit him." The judge said Cordick "had no reason to act that way" no matter what the other driver did, fined Cordick $450 and put him on probation for six months.

Two preliminary hearings of major narcotics charges before Green ended with orders for trials in a higher court.

One case involved a charge against Victoria area resident Stephen Forrest Ramage, 20, and Lori Head, 18, of Mission, B.C., of trafficking in speed in Victoria Sept. 25, 1975.

The other concerned a charge against Stephen Douglas Andreas, 17, of 880 Vernon, of possession of marijuana June 21 in Victoria for the purpose of trafficking.

In the court section of Judge William Ostler, a six-month term of probation and 35 hours of community work were set for Calvin Chow, 18, of 612 Speed, who pleaded guilty June 18 to a Victoria charge of theft about March 15 of an $860 cassette recorder from Victoria high school. Chow also admitted June 18 possession of a small amount of marijuana at his residence June 10 and was fined $75.

Ronald Wayne Bittner, 20, of 4392 Happy Valley Road, was found guilty by Ostler after a trial on a charge of possession of a small amount of marijuana March 25 in Saanich. Bittner, who had a previous conviction in June of 1975, was fined $200 while two others charged with him for the March 25 offence were also convicted and fined $75 each as first offenders.

Bail $100,000 in drug case

Bail has been set at $100,000 for the last person previously ordered held in custody in a major narcotics charge against six persons, prosecutor Cecil Branson disclosed Wednesday.

Branson said a B.C. supreme court ruling in Vancouver set the bail for Robert Archibald Brook, 24, of West Vancouver, and added a number of bail conditions including surrender of his Canadian passport and residence only in Victoria and Vancouver counties except for a trip to Toronto for court proceedings.

Brook, three other men and two women were originally charged in late April with importing marijuana. While seizures were made on the B.C. mainland and in the U.S., the charge was laid in Victoria provincial court because much of the basic investigation was done by officers stationed here.

Bail was refused for Brook and George Arthur Falkner, also known as Baker, 50, of Texada Island, while surety bail was set for the two other men and the women were released on their own recognizance in sizeable sums.

Later, the six were charged with conspiracy to import and traffic in marijuana and Branson said the prosecution would go ahead only with the new charge at a three-week preliminary hearing scheduled for October and November.

All previous bail orders were applied to the new charge and, by this time, all of the accused persons had been released but Brook and Falkner, who won a B.C. supreme court ruling that his bail be set at $50,000.

The Colonist learned Wednesday arrangements for posting of bail for Brook and Falkner may be nearing completion and the two men are likely to be released well before their hearing starts Oct. 12.

Falkner was in the news in recent weeks for challenging a B.C. corrections branch policy forbidding conjugal visits. He said his continued detention could "wreck the warm, loving relationship" of eight years with his wife Beth Ann Baker, 24, another of the accused persons.

A branch official wrote to Falkner to give lack of facilities as one reason for the policy but Falkner continued his campaign with a letter to Attorney-General Garde Gardom. So far, there has been no report of an answer—but release on $50,000 bail could provide that.

Buyer of car jailed for taking revenge

People might feel some sympathy toward a victim of "a bad deal, particularly over cars," Judge F. S. Green said Wednesday in Victoria provincial court, but what a 24-year-old Saanich man did in revenge was far too much.

As a result, Green sentenced Daniel Guy Mercier, 48 Simms, to five days in jail.

Mercier pleaded guilty to a Victoria charge of mischief and prosecutor Nicholas Lang said it happened about 12:55 p.m. June 27 on the lot of Select Motors, 950 Yates.

Lang said Mercier went up to a parked 1968 Thunderbird and tore off an antenna and a rear-view side mirror, let the air out of two rear tires, scraped the paint in a line from front to back and scratched elsewhere on the paint: "If you want to rip someone off, watch out (warning)."

The prosecutor said Mercier, stopped in the 800 block Yates, told police he had bought a car from Select that was "a $3,000 pile of junk and had done it for revenge." He said damage done by Mercier was about $1,000 and the car firm was taking private legal action.

"It appears to me he should have gone to consumer affairs instead of this peculiar sort of self-help," Lang said.

Mercier said he was "very drunk" and Greer added "it was a stupid thing to do . . . perhaps (people) might feel some sympathy over a bad deal, particularly over cars . . . but I regard the matter as serious."

Coroner probes deaths in fires

An inquiry will be held in the death of a Victoria man after a fire and a second inquiry is probable in the death of a Nanaimo man who was recovering from fire injuries, district coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre said Wednesday.

The coroner said an inquiry would be held shortly in the case of Donald Fry, 77, of 250 Douglas, who died late Tuesday in Victoria General Hospital.

Fry suffered burns over 70 per cent of his body Monday night in his bedroom. Police said he had been feeling ill and took two sleeping pills before retiring. Soon after, Mrs. Fry and a friend in the living room smelled smoke and found Fry "engulfed in flames."

Indications were fire injuries might not have caused the death of Nanaimo resident Ernest Garnet Kelly, 73, in Victoria General Hospital Monday.

On May 4, when Kelly was a cancer patient in Memorial Pavilion at Royal Jubilee Hospital, he suffered burns to one hand, one arm and the side of his body in a fire in his bed. He was transferred to the VGH burns unit and was reported recovering from the burns when he died.

St. Jorre said an inquiry was probable after more information was received.

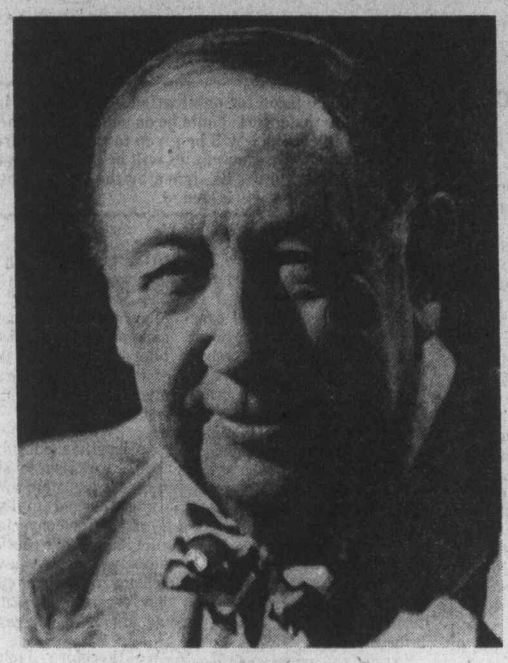

The coroner said an inquiry in the death of Lawrence Longton, 78, of 350 Douglas, showed it was accidental and due to drowning. Longton, who suffered a severe heart attack in 1974, was found Monday floating face down in the swimming pool of his apartment block.

He normally did not go swimming alone but his wife was absent buying groceries before the arrival of relatives for a visit.

U.S. not ready for long war

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Assistant Navy Secretary Jack Bowers says the U.S. military is not prepared to wage a conventional war of "sustained duration." He said, however, the military would correct the readiness situation if the nation seemed to be approaching a conventional war situation.

Sentimental Sinclair?

"That's right folks.

I've never been short of good business reasons for buying Sterling Silver Olympic Coins.

But with the excitement building fast, and with the world on it's way to Canada for the 1976 Olympics, you can't blame a guy for feeling proud or even a bit sentimental.

That's why Series VII coins are so precious. They're real money but they have a value that goes beyond dollars and cents.

They're the last series of Olympic Coins to be minted, and will be the best souvenir you can buy of this great event.

But don't wait around!

With a lot of people feeling the same way as me and with all those visitors coming, these beautiful works of art might not be as easy to buy later on.

So buy them this week before the rush starts."

For the second time in a week, the theft-plagued Tivoli Studios at 1841 Oak Bay is changing a door lock, a Victoria police report disclosed Wednesday.

The report also disclosed the total value of photographic equipment stolen June 30 in a break-in at the camera firm was $6,466.

Police said owner Ronald Jones bought a new lock for a rear door after the break-in. It was put into place Saturday and its two keys were put in a lock box on a table in the rear office.

Sometime between closing at 5:30 p.m. Saturday and opening at 8:40 a.m. Monday, the box and keys disappeared. The report said police advised Jones to get another new lock.

The break-in was the third major theft at photographic shops in Greater Victoria this year but police said they did not think the stolen materials were taken by criminals from outside the area.

One veteran investigator said photographic equipment, especially cameras, are among the easiest items to sell in local beer parlors. He added that situation applies the year around, not just during the tourist season.

Saanich man reels in four at Becher Bay

Alfred Perri, 3149 Orillia in Saanich, was really reeling them in Tuesday morning while fishing Becher Bay waters.

Perri got his limit of chinooks with a 37-pounder, a 22-pounder, a 21-pounder and a 12-pounder in four hours of fishing near the Trap Shack at Becher Bay using Rhys Davis Minnow Teaser.

Perri said the 37-pounder was a white chinook and gave him a good fight for about 20 minutes before he was able to boat it.

But a bigger one may have got away. Perri had another strike, and the fish made a long run and managed to straighten out a heavy-duty hook and swim free.

This one must have been a heavyweight and Perri said: "I sure would like to have seen him."

Perri currently holds the lead as the Colonist subscriber with the heaviest chinook with a 54-pounder, also caught at the Trap Shack on Rhys Davis Minnow Teaser.

THE BEAST. AND THE BEAUTY.

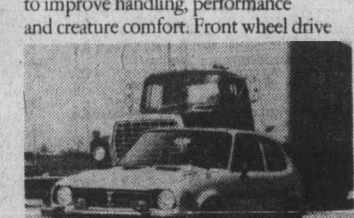

Once upon a time, Honda undertook the creation of a mechanical marvel. It was to be a car, one that would belong with the other hallowed names of the animal kingdom: the greater cats, the gazelles, the fowl of the air, the reptiles and so on.

After years of toil, thousands of man-hours, unrelenting testing and several strokes of genius, the incomparable result was unleashed. Honda Civic CVCC.

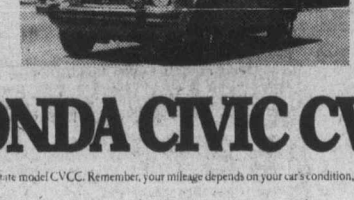

At the heart of the beast is a new kind of power: a stratified charge engine patented by Honda. The CVCC engine unlocks a puzzle that had previously defied solution. It increases performance while simultaneously increasing gasoline mileage. Before CVCC, the wiliest automotive wizards had been forced to sacrifice economy every time they attempted to add muscle.

The shrewdness of Honda extended to giving the CVCC a 5-speed transmission. To reduce highway cruising noise. To prolong the life of the engine by reducing wear on gears, pistons and cylinders. And to increase highway cruising mileage. The CVCC is the reigning EPA king of beasts with 56.4 highway mpg.*

In fleshing out the brute, Honda Civic CVCC incorporates the latest refinements to improve handling, performance and creature comfort. Front wheel drive increases interior space and places engine weight over the drive wheels to improve footing in snowy and slippery conditions. The steering is precise rack and pinion. The suspension is MacPherson strut, independent on all four paws for a padded ride. The braking is power-assisted front disc, diagonally connected to rear drums for added safety. Other standard features are familiar from legendary sports cars: radial tires, tachometer, reclining bucket seats and more.

Here's the beauty.

Honda Civic CVCC is one of the lowest priced 5-speeds you can buy. Now there's a happy ending for you. HONDA

HONDA CIVIC CVCC.

*Based on EPA mileage estimates for 49-state model CVCC. Remember, your mileage depends on your car's condition, equipment, the weather and your driving habits.

French ask English to go

MONTREAL (CP) — Frenchspeaking air controllers in Quebec want their English colleagues to leave the province because their presence in control towers affects morale and could endanger safety, said a controllers' representative Wednesday.

Pierre Beaudry, secretary-general of the Association des Gens de l'Air whose members include French-speaking controllers and pilots, insisted that no safety problem currently exists in Quebec air communications.

Asked if safety could suffer if unitingual English controllers remain in the province, Mr. Beaudry said: "Definitely, yes."

He cited a letter from M. A. G. Daigle, head of control operations in Montreal, to his superior, Maurice Petrie, saying that control operations were normal at Quebec airports this week.

"We have received written assurances from a group of our (Fench) controllers to the effect that, in case of the exodus of some of our (English) controllers, the French controllers guarantee safe and efficient operations," the letter said.

Mr. Beaudry said in a telephone interview from Quebec City that English controllers were scheduled to meet representatives of the federal transport department today to discuss their transfer outside Quebec.

Meanwhile, the executive of the Gens de l'Air will meet with Transport Minister Otto Lang in Ottawa.

Topics for discussion include the transfer of English controllers and a possible role for the Gens de l'Air in the commission investigating bilingual air communications.

Inquest handling attacked

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C. (CP) — The sister of the British Columbia penitentiary worker killed in a hostage-taking incident last year said Wednesday that the inquest into her sister's death was not handled very well.

Margaret Haronitis, made the comment after a coroner's jury ruled Tuesday that classification officer Mary Steinhauser's death June 11, 1975, at the penitentiary was unnatural and accidental.

"I'm upset by the finding of the jury that the penitentiary's tactical squad was justified in their action because they were firm in the belief that they were saving her life," said Mrs. Haronitis.

"That's tantamount that they were justified in killing her trying to save her. I don't find much logic in that statement."

Possible defect in Hydro buses

B.C. Hydro pulled 34 General Motors diesel buses off the road Wednesday to x-ray the steering mechanisms for a possibly dangerous defect.

The buses were part of a purchase of 43 units made from GM in 1975 by the provincial bureau of transit services. Nine of the buses are in storage.

There was no indication how many of the buses were in Greater Victoria.

B.C. Hydro's check of the potentially defective steering part was delayed by problems in the mail service.

A spokesman for GM in London, Ont., said Tuesday that registered letters had been sent to purchasers of 714 buses more than a week ago.

Hydro learned Wednesday by telephone that some of its buses were involved in the check and promptly took all the suspected units out of service. The registered letter never arrived.

A B.C. Hydro spokesman in Vancouver said the check of the buses would take approximately three days.

The potential problem concerns a bevel gear in the steering mechanism, the spokesman said.

The removal of the buses should not disrupt regular transit service, he said.

No accidents have been reported as a result of the defect.

The buses, costing approximately $60,000 each, were delivered to cities all across Canada.

In Ottawa, the municipal transit authority took 69 buses out of service for the safety check. One of the first five tested contained the defective gear.

Both Hydro and GM have requested an explanation from the post office concerning the misplaced registered letter.

A Vancouver post office spokesman said all mail from eastern Canada has been delayed as a result of the eight-day disruption of air services by pilots and traffic controllers.

Plans frustrated —region board

About half a dozen developers with holdings in Langford and Colwood are frustrating the Capital Region Board's plans for those areas, according to regional board chairman James Campbell.

Campbell said in an interview Wednesday he was seeking an immediate meeting with Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis to discuss the matter.

Last week, Curtis informed the regional board in a letter that he wouldn't support a bylaw introducing a temporary land freeze covering about 1,500 acres in the Colwood-Langford area.

Campbell said he would try to get the minister to change his mind.

The proposed land freeze was to remain in effect only until community plans for Langford and Colwood have been completed later this year.

Curtis said in his letter he wasn't prepared to stop development proposals already under way by approving the proposed development freeze.

Campbell, however, said there would be no question of halting projects in the development stage. The courts, he said, had frequently ruled that no bylaw could impede projects already in the construction stage.

Before the proposed development freeze can be applied, it needs approval from the provincial government. Regional boards don't have autonomy in zoning matters.

Neglect charged in Tally-Ho stables

Poirier
. . . heated arguments

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Reporter

An angry Don Poirier said Wednesday he was fired after three days as barn manager for Tally-Ho sightseeing tours because he insisted on defending the company's horses against "extreme cruelty" and neglect.

But his charges weren't supported by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals whom he sicked on the company after his dismissal Tuesday.

And a company spokesman gave another reason for the firing. He said Poirier couldn't get along with his fellow employees.

Poirier's claims that the company's horses were cruelly treated, had sores on their necks and mouths and that the lone stallion was neglected and seriously sick brought two SPCA inspectors into the picture Wednesday morning.

SPCA manager Don Adams said the inspection at the company's Blenkinsop Road stable disclosed some problems but nothing that would begin to support a case for prosecution.

He said the stallion's feet and legs were "not in good shape" and that it hadn't had sufficient exercise. In addition, a veterinarian was treating several horses for an outbreak of influenza and three teams of horses had been sidelined because of collar sores suffered through faulty handling, he said.

Adams said the horses had suffered the sores because an inexperienced driver hadn't known how to properly operate the brakes on the Tally-Ho sightseeing wagons.

Some of these findings coincided with complaints Poirier had made in a prior interview with the Colonist. He charged that most of the employees handling the horses were inexperienced and that he suspected some didn't know how to use the brakes.

Tally-Ho on rounds

He also said there had been an outbreak of colds and that his refusal to send sick horses into the streets played a part in his job loss.

"They kept calling for horses and I told them the horses were sick and not to bother me," said Poirier, whose normal occupation is as a mid-Vancouver Island independent logger.

He said company employees didn't seem to care about this and kept demanding more horses.

"They said they had a meeting the night before and had decided there were to be eight teams of horses on the road Tuesday. They ended up with seven teams."

He said that because of his heated arguments in defence of the horses he almost came to blows with one company official before he was fired.

Company trainer Bob Collins, who has now stepped into Poirier's role as barn manager, agreed several horses had suffered neck sores but said the inexperienced driver responsible had been fired.

"He never should have been hired in the first place," he said.

As for Poirer, he said: "He wasn't fired because of the horses. He couldn't get along with people."

Tally-Ho owner Daniel Arias, who bought the company in 1974, also denied the horses were being mistreated.

Adams said SPCA inspectors check the horses about once every two months. He said the inspection spurred by Poirier showed the stallion was in need of exercise and that a paddock for this purpose was partially constructed.

He said there was no legal definition of what adequate exercise was, the stallion, he said, is being treated by a veterinarian for poor circulation in its legs.

Any case of prosecution would depend heavily on the word of the veterinarian, he said.

"And the doctor says there is nothing inhumane here."

Collins denied charges by Poirier that the stallion's stall was filthy, that the stallion showed signs of never having been groomed and that it was never taken out for exercise.

"I take it out and exercise it three times a day," he said.

When he called the SPCA, Poirier said the stallion had been "down" three times Tuesday, was in danger of losing its life, was stoved (swollen legs) and had thrush (hoof rotting.)

"Champion (the stallion) is stoved and has thrush of the feet from being allowed to stand constantly in his own urine and manure and from standing on a rubber mat on top of concrete in a barn without proper ventilation, without proper drainage or proper lighting," Poirier told the Colonist.

"It is absolutely extreme cruelty the way Champion and the mares have been handled."

He said the mares were working with extremely sore necks because they were fitted with croupes instead of a britching harness, something which he said meant they took the full weight of the wagonloads of tourists with their necks and shoulders.

Due to the inexperience of the teamsters the majority of the horses come in every night with sores on their mouths and sores on the tops of their necks and extremely sore shoulders.

"I asked the owner (Arias) for some Epsom salts for the sores Tuesday morning to treat the sores and there was none there at quitting time."

Of Champion, he said: "I personally cleaned Champion's stall and there are people working there who say it hadn't really been cleaned in two years.

"It was evident Champion — he's only five years old — had never really been groomed or exercised. His hide was filthy with his own dirt and he had no real muscles.

"Allowing something like this is a disgrace to the city of Victoria. The trouble is, most people don't know anything about draft horses."

He claimed the stallion would have been in pain "beyond belief."

"It's a little like the prisoner in solitary confinement. Only for the horse, it's worse. Because the horse can't speak for himself and he won't cry out unless his life is in danger."

Meanwhile, Adams said the company had always cooperated willingly with the SPCA when the inspectors made any recommendations.

He said he understood there had been some delays in the building of the exercise paddock.

Arias said later the company building the steel enclosement had run into delays concerning material.

In denying that the stallion was neglected, Collins said: "The owner isn't going to risk endangering the health of a stallion that's worth $5,000."

Royal Oak group opposes industry

By ELEANOR BOYLE
Colonist Reporter

Royal Oak residents organized solidly for the first time Wednesday against proposed light industrial development slated to cover more than 100 acres around Glanford and Vanalman.

They filled Holland House auditorium to find out about plans after hearing that Saanich recently applied to have the land removed from Agricultural Land Reserve.

What brought most of them to the 8 p.m. meeting was a letter that had been delivered asking: "Would you like to sell your home for half its market value? You may have to if the municipality has their way."

Vocal audience members made it clear they didn't, and they told meeting chairman and author of the letter, Lawrence Cook of Northridge Crescent, they wanted as little disruptive development in the area as possible.

No Saanich officials attended but one meeting organizer, Mary Szalai of the Northridge Community Association, outlined plans for the area largely destined for warehouses.

Audience members wanted details of any developments, and were concerned about increasing traffic and higher taxes without compensating higher land values.

Royal Oak ratepayers' group member Dick Gauthier said he had been told the warehousing would mean increased traffic of about 350 vehicles just between 3 and 5 p.m. daily, most of it travelling on Glanford.

Some surprising information the audience heard included:

- Glanford has been surveyed to become four-lane for more than a year.
- More than 20 acres of the land are already set aside for a B.C. Hydro lot that would house not only administrative buildings but also line trucks and other heavy equipment.
- Wilkinson Road is also slated for four lanes.
- Only landowners within the property boundary were invited to a recent Saanich meeting, and only a handful of those were homeowners there. Szalai said most are corporations or speculators.

Several people in the audience said the land will be developed in some manner, and that residents should propose alternatives to light industrial use.

Many stayed behind after the two-hour meeting to sign up for a joint Northridge-Royal Oak committee that will oppose any detrimental development.

And there was anger from some who said Saanich council members hadn't taken individual stands on the development issue. One man said he was denied his legal right to obtain a copy of council minutes when he went to the municipal hall recently.

The meeting will likely produce a flurry of protest letters to Mayor Ed Lum and B.C. land commission chairman Gary Runka. The more than 100 residents attending were given addresses and told that 100 letters to municipal council were "devastating."

Name harder to catch

Big-nosed catch held by 13-year-old Cameron Butts of 1122 Goldstream in Langford has elegant scientific name of hydrolagus colliei but lowly common name of rat fish. Fish is common from Baja, Calif., to Alaska and is usually found between 50 and 500 fathoms deep. Sharp point protruding from back of head is part of fish's spine.

Barber wants to debate labor

Charles Barber (NDP—Victoria) took his "strikes and lockouts are obsolete" message to the Victoria Labor Council Wednesday and challenged it to publicly debate the issue.

After the meeting, the freshman MLA said he would take the same challenge to the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce and is considering arranging a week-long seminar and debate where the whole issue of industrial democracy and worker cooperation would be discussed by labor, management, and outside resource people familiar with the European system.

Council president John Schibli said there was not time to discuss Barber's proposal at the meeting but later said a public debate might prove worthwhile. He doubted, however, that the European worker democracy system would meld with the North American tradition of a labor-management adversary system.

Barber later said he had no illusion about the unpopularity of his message, particularly among older trade unionists, and at one point during his talk to the meeting one delegate muttered: "I can't believe it."

Barber told the meeting that strikes and lockouts were now obsolete and had served their purpose.

"It is possible that these devices, devised in the 19th century, will not serve us in the 21st century," he said.

Race yacht in trouble

The U.S. coast guard went to the aid of a boat in the Victoria-Maui Yacht Race Wednesday, and another boat has withdrawn.

The fleet ran into 15-foot waves and a southwest wind blowing at 35 to 40 miles an hour in the fifth day of the 2,300 mile race.

P-zazz, a 36-foot sloop out of Tacoma, lost its mast in choppy seas and skipper Bill Nelson of the boat was waiting to be towed back home by the coast guard.

Race communications officer Tom Orr of West Vancouver said there was no reason to fear for the boat or its crew.

"They are about 270 miles due west off the coast of Oregon. The coast guard has dispatched a vessel from Astoria to go out and pick them up."

Thunder, a small 36-foot sloop from Portland, withdrew after experiencing electrical troubles.

The Seattle boat Joli maintained her lead after opening up 65 miles between herself and one of the smallest boats in the fleet — Orango-tang of Kitsilano — on Tuesday.

Joli still has about 1,650 miles to go to Maui.

Joli's sister ship Sorcery, which is registered out of Lahaina, Hawaii, is in second place now, 110 miles back. Both are 61-foot sloops built by C and C Yachts of Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ont.

They are followed by Race Passage out of Bremerton, and Terna III sailed by Per Christoffersen of West Vancouver. Terna III is about 165 miles behind Joli.

Vandals rampage

RCMP Wednesday began investigating several incidents involving vandalism and break-ins.

Vandals broke eight windows in the Rock City school overnight. A damage estimate was not available. It was the second time in a week that vandals hit the school.

Elsewhere a windshield in a truck on a car sales lot was smashed. A house at 803 Short Street was entered and about $25 taken and a room at the Commercial Hotel was entered and two wallets, both containing credit cards, were stolen.

Police also said the Cranberry Hotel was entered and an empty cash register taken.

1,000 get work by computer

Just over 1,000 Greater Victoria students have been hired so far in the provincial labor department's Seasonal Employment program which utilizes an innovative new computer system.

Under the system, an applicant need only fill out one application form when applying for more than one provincial government job.

Nearly 4,000 jobs are expected to be filled this summer throughout B.C. through the student referral system.

Application forms were distributed throughout universities and high schools earlier this year and all completed applications were fed into the computer. Print-outs of all information were sent out to personnel officers who submitted job requests.

LARGE PETROGLYPH boulder was bulldozed in 1963 from Fulford Harbour floor at an extreme low tide during construction of Cudmore log dump, according to the book Indian Petroglyphs of the Pacific Northwest, by Beth and Ray Hill, published by Hancock House Publishers Ltd. in 1974. Book also mentions two smaller boulders with petroglyphs discovered at the same time.

Salt Spring petroglyph boulder

He wants to 'set record straight'

By HUBERT BEYER
Colonist Reporter

An angry Gordon Cudmore of Salt Spring Island "set the record straight" Wednesday with regard to a three-ton petroglyph boulder now sitting on his property, next to a airstrip he built several years ago.

The boulder with a large face carved into its surface will stay right where it is, and Cudmore has a letter from Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy saying so.

Cudmore lashed back at critics who recently accused him of removing the boulder from his log dump at Fulford Harbor on Salt Spring.

In an interview, he said he found the boulder below low-water mark with just the tip sticking out of the mud.

He found it while logging under contract with B.C. Forest Products.

Cudmore needed rocks at the time to protect a log dump, so he moved it temporarily to someone else's property.

"Nobody knew that the rock was where I found it, and nobody would have ever known, because it was in the mud in an area you can't get to," Cudmore said.

"Where it's now, people can see it; there's a road leading to the airstrip," he added.

"If anyone has a right to the rock, it's me, and next in line would be the Indians," Cudmore said.

The people who have objected most loudly to removal of the petroglyph boulder, he said, were the ones who wanted it for themselves.

He listed four names of people who had asked him for the boulder; one wanted to put it into a school, another in front of his store, the third wanted it moved to Centennial Park and the fourth to another store.

Cudmore criticized Mrs. McCarthy for not telling the B.C. Legislature a month ago that she had allowed him to leave the boulder at the present location.

At the time, Robert Skelly, New Democratic Party MLA for Alberni, asked in the Legislature whether charges would be laid against Cudmore for removing the petroglyph.

Cudmore said Mrs. McCarthy knew then that she had already given him permission to keep the boulder where it was.

An order-in-council, he said, had designated the rock as a historical site on May 19. Skelly raised the question in the Legislature in early June.

Cudmore also said that two other petroglyph boulders found by him at the same time (early spring), had disappeared.

"How come nobody is making a fuss about those rocks? They were stolen," he said.

One of the boulders, Cudmore added, had a quarter-moon carving on it.

He blamed old animosities for the fuss over his removal of the petroglyph.

Several years ago, Cudmore built an airstrip on his property, and the project was bitterly opposed by a number of Salt Spring Island residents.

He said the same people who opposed the airstrip had opposed the removal of the boulder.

"But nobody talks of the good the airstrip is doing. I don't get a penny's revenue out of it," he said.

Among those using the airstrip, he said, were the Canadian Coast Guard, forestry officials, the RCMP and some of those who tried to stop him from building it at the time.

"I built the airstrip because I wanted to fly, but it's been of benefit to the whole community at no cost to them," he said.

Cudmore said he hoped the whole thing would soon be forgotten.

"I think it was extremely unfair; the press reports made me look like a common thief," he said.

"I've been here since 1927 and I don't want to do anything detrimental to the community," Cudmore said.

Mrs. McCarthy wasn't available for comment on the matter Wednesday.

West German celebration

Indians help festival

OTTAWA (CP) — A group of Canadian native people are leaving for West Germany to participate in the 25th anniversary of an Indian festival that never before has had major Indian participation.

Fifteen Haida dancers from the Queen Charlotte Islands plus nine artists, including two from Saskatchewan, will spend three weeks at a festival in Bad Segeberg near Hamburg.

They are being assisted by a $11,500 grant from the external affairs department plus some transportation from the armed forces.

The Canadians will be joining the Karl May Festival, held for the last 25 years in the 10,000-seat amphitheatre in Bad Segeberg.

Karl May was an author who in the 1800s drew from existing works to write 72 novels about North American Indians and the development of the North American West.

Tony Belcourt, Ottawa consultant who arranged the trip, said in a recent interview the books are still used as texts in West German schools and are fairly accurate and sympathetic to the Indian cause.

"The people there know more about Indians than most North Americans," said the former president of the Native Council of Canada.

Several plays have been written from the May works and these are the focal point of the festival, which draws audiences from throughout West Germany and from neighboring countries, Belcourt said.

The Haida dancers — called Eagle Dancers after their Eagle clan — will be joined by seven West Coast artists. Three men, Red Davidson, Denis Hanuse and Beau Dick were carving a six-foot totem pole in Vancouver that would be completed at the festival and presented to the city.

The British Columbians will be joined by Ken Goodwell, a Saskatchewan Sioux singer and dancer, and Ed Lavalee, a Cree dancer who is the former director of the Indian Cultural Centre in Saskatchewan.

The artists will conduct workshops when not performing. The oldest member of the dancing group is Ada Yovonovich, 72. The youngest is her nine-year-old niece Kim.

Angolan hearing fair but outcome rapped

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg lawyer George Lockwood says procedures in the recent trial of 13 mercenaries in Angola may have been generally fair, but the outcome was less than just.

Lockwood attended the trial on the invitation of the Angolan government as one of 44 observers from more than 30 countries.

Four mercenaries — three from Britain and one from the U.S. — were sentenced to the executed, and nine others sentenced to various prison terms.

Lockwood said he was surprised at only one of the sentences — the death penalty for U.S. citizen Daniel Gearhart.

He described Gearhart as "a silly little ass" who had been in Angola for only a few days and did not deserve the sentence because he hadn't really been involved in the fighting.

He said that in his opinion, Gearhart should not have been on trial at all, since he got himself implicated by talking too much about things in which he wasn't involved.

Lockwood is an executive member of the Canadian section of Amnesty International, a voluntary organization which protests persecution of political prisoners. He is also a part-time judge in Manitoba's provincial judges court.

Considering general differences in the judicial systems of countries around the world, he said, the trial in Angola observed basic courtroom principles.

However, he said there were prejudices in the trial and some of the charges were somewhat unusual.

The 13 were charged with being mercenaries, a charge that "I don't think really exists in Angolan law."

As well, they were charged with acting against peace, similar to charges laid in Nuremberg after the Second World War.

"But that was an international tribunal, while the Angolan case was a national trial."

Lockwood said he was impressed with the fairness of the chief judge of the five-man court, but the chief and one other judge were the only ones with solid legal training.

He was critical of the court's decision to allow the prosecution to show a gory film about mercenaries, which had no relevance to the accused or the situation and was inflammatory.

As well, he found the court too generous in allowing political statements and hearsay evidence during the trial.

The court did not specify when the executions would take place, and in the meantime Britain and the U.S. are attempting to have the sentences reduced on humanitarian grounds.

MPs look well ahead for extra six days off

OTTAWA (CP)—MPs have decided to give themselves another six days off this century, provided the Commons is sitting in late June and July in 1982, 1993 and 1999.

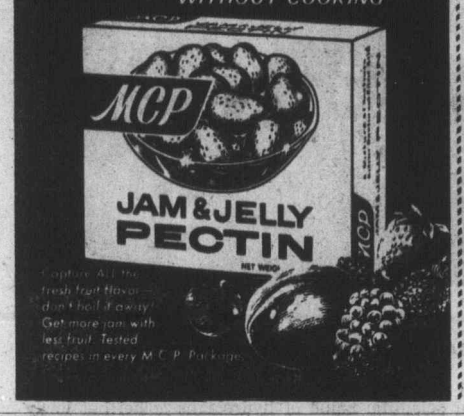

The decision came when the Commons unanimously approved a motion by Social Credit MP Adrien Lambert (Bellechasse) that the House not sit on following Fridays when the June 24 St. Jean Baptiste Day and July 1 national holidays fall on Thursday.

The Commons took last Friday off following the Thursday July 1 holiday. But it sat the Friday before after taking the Thursday, June 24 holiday off in honor of the patron saint of Quebec.

SURREY MAYOR EYES SPECIAL CRIME UNIT

SURREY (CP) — First he wanted to bring in the army to deal with juvenile delinquents in Surrey.

Then he wanted to recruit a roving regiment of citizen-band operators to patrol the municipality in search of vandals.

Now he wants a "mod squad" of specially-trained policemen to roam from municipality to municipality and swoop down on trouble spots.

Mayor Ed McKitka's one-man campaign against crime continues unabated.

The mayor suggested Monday that police detachments here and in surrounding areas each donate one officer to a specialty unit whose task would be to concentrate on offences such as breaking and entering.

The idea, he said, "worked marvellous in New York."

McKitka said the crime rate in Surrey was almost getting out of hand and it was time to take decisive steps to "clean this place up."

The mayor was not convinced by statistics showing reported crimes from January to the end of May dropped in Surrey by about 1,600 over the same period last year.

"Maybe people are just fed up with calling," he replied when informed of the decline by Ald. Bill Millar, chairman of the Surrey police-liaison committee.

Millar said the RCMP detachment received more than 50,000 reports last year. He said the five-month reduction was significant in light of the two-per-cent population increase during that period.

But the alderman agreed to raise the mayor's suggestion at the next meeting of the police-liaison committee.

Sheet steel demand holding up

TORONTO (CP) — Demand for sheet steel in Canada remains strong in such areas as automotive and appliance industries but demand for steel remains weak in heavy construction and transportation industries, says an official of the Steel Co. of Canada Ltd. (Stelco), Toronto.

A. R. McMurrich, vice-president of marketing for the company, said industry exports of hot-and cold-rolled sheet steel are good but "not sensational for Stelco in particular."

The company might have exported more at the end of 1973 and in 1974 but domestic demand was strong, he said.

Figures from Statistics Canada show that sheet and strip steel exports were up 42.8 per cent in the first fourth months of this year, compared with the similar period a year earlier.

A market analyst said exports last April were the highest since December, 1972, but that mills have reacted responsibly to demands of the domestic market.

An official of Dominion Foundries and Steel Ltd., Hamilton, said domestic demand for sheet steel is stronger than expected and that the company has not booked an additional export order since last January.

William Simon, general sales manager, said the company has been "operating virtually at full capacity since late 1975."

Delivery dates have stretched out for sheet steel but the tightness of supply should peak only for six to eight weeks and be over by September, he said.

Simon said some factors contributing to the tightness have been an increase in automotive production schedules and production problems at other steel companies.

An official of Algoma Steel Corp. Ltd., Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., said the company finds demand for its sheet steel is holding up.

Donald McEachern, general manager, production sales, said demand for plate and heavy structural steels is weak. A plate price increase of $24 a ton; effective Aug. 1, probably will stick despite the weak demand, he said.

Police recover stolen francs

DUBLIN (UPI) — Police have recovered approximately $530,000 in French francs believed part of the $3.6 million robbery at London's Heathrow airport last week, a spokesman said Tuesday. The haul followed a similar find Friday amounting to $900,000 in the same area of the city centre.

Chip tip

Tiny chip of metal oxide silicon from NCR Corp. is called microprocessor and it contains equivalent of 2,000 transistors. Miniature circuits on chip control operation of electronic data terminals which record transactions in banks, department stores and supermarkets.

Some too popular

Shortage of cars

TORONTO (CP) — Buoyancy in the Canadian automobile market and increased sales in the United States might lead to shortages of some models of Canadian cars, industry officials say.

Representatives of North American automobile makers say inventories are adequate for the summer months but that shortages may develop in some of the more popular models.

M. J. Closs, vice-president of marketing for Chrysler Canada Ltd., said Wednesday his company has a 48-day supply of automobiles on hand. However, this includes cars in transit that will not reach dealer showrooms for about 15 days, decreasing the overall average supply to about 33 days, he said.

The company has only about a 15-day supply of fast-selling Volare and Aspen compacts introduced this model year, he said. The change to the 1977 model year begins this month at Canadian plants.

Closs said the company hopes to swing into the sale of 1977 models as quickly as possible and that some are expected to arrive in dealer showrooms in the third week of August.

A spokesman for Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd. said there is some tightness in the supply of popular Granada and Monarch models and in the full-size Ford, Marquis and Mercury lines. However, the company does not expect major supply problems, he said.

Pound climbs

BRUSSELS (UPI) — The British pound maintained its steady upward trend against the dollar Wednesday, as the Bank of England and the British treasury confirmed that Britain had spent over $1 billion of its standby credit to support its currency.

The Bank of England said Britain had spent part of the standby credits of $5.3 billion it had received from 12 countries after its reserves were depleted by support for the pound. A treasury official, while not disclosing the amount, said the first drawings on the credit were made June 22.

Banking source estimates of the amount of the credit that Britain has spent range from $1 billion to $1.5 billion.

In London the pound improved from $1.803 to $1.80375.

'Karate chop' chance missed

U.K. banks stayed in Rhodesia

LONDON (Reuter) — Britain might have dealt a "karate chop" to Rhodesia's economy several years ago by forcing all British-controlled banks and other companies in the break-away colony to close, says the head of the giant Lonrho trading company.

Roland (Tiny) Rowland, in a letter to his lawyer made public Wednesday, said he had once urged British authorities to take various courses of action which would have been effective against the white minority regime in the rebel African colony.

Rowland's allegation was the latest in a barrage of counter-charges against the British government following publication Tuesday of an official report critical of the company's business methods.

Asked to comment, a foreign office spokesman said that after Rhodesia broke with Britain in November, 1967, British subsidiaries there had acted as autonomous units and were virtually under the control of Salisbury authorities.

Rowland said Britain could have crippled the Rhodesian economy by forcing closure of British-controlled banks and other companies, but added "this was felt to damage the interest of British banking."

The letter added that as a result "British banking continues to be the commercial backbone of Rhodesia and British companies are the dependent ribs."

Rowland said another example of British failure to implement fully United Nations' sanctions against the Salisbury regime was in the supply of oil to Rhodesia.

After Lonrho shut its oil pipeline through Portuguese Mozambique, the state-owned British Petroleum (BP) oil company immediately began sending fuel to Rhodesia, he alleged.

BP has denied that it broke UN sanctions.

A volumious government report criticizing Lonrho's business ethics dominated the front pages of Britain's newspapers Wednesday.

Government inspectors documented a complex account of financial links between Lonrho directors, lavish rent-free housing, take-over deals, expense claims and special payments to company associates, reviving arguments about ethics in the world of high finance.

It also spotlighted the flamboyant personality of Rowland the company's chief executive a burly six-footer accustomed to getting his own way.

Under Rowland's leadership, Lonrho spread from an obscure mining company in Rhodesia to a sprawling conglomerate, employing 100,000 people whose activities cover 43 countries.

In the last two years, Rowland has forged links with the ruling family in Kuwait and Arab interests now have a big stake in the company.

But the main casualty of the affair has been Angus Ogilvy, husband of Princess Alexandra, the Queen's cousin. Ogilvy's conduct as a former Lonrho director was severely criticized in the report.

Drillers were active

CALGARY (CP) — The oil industry's drilling activity showed a significant increase in the first six months of 1976 and some drilling rigs which left western Canada in the second half of 1975 have returned.

As of June 26 this year, oil and gas well completions in Canada totalled 2,401, compared with 1,738 for the same period last year. Footage increased to 7,865,637 from 6,223,333.

Stan Jones, general manager of the Canadian Association of Oilwell Drilling Contractors, said the number of rigs in western Canada dropped to 275 at the end of last year from 332 in mid-1975.

However, some of the rigs returned in the first half of this year and the number stood at 291 in mid-1976.

Jones said that in May, usually a light month for drilling, the rig utilization rate this year was 36 per cent, more than double the rate of 16 per cent in May, 1975.

The utilization rate in the last winter drilling season—from mid-December to the end of March—was among the highest in recent years, peaking at 90 per cent.

Jones said the upswing in drilling activity, especially in Alberta where the number of well completions increased to 2,141 in the first half of this year from 1,506 a year ago, resulted from a general improvement in the political climate.

AIB rules could force move to U.S.

MONTREAL (CP) — Dissatisfaction with federal anti-inflation guidelines could result in Montreal-based Imasco Ltd. expanding in the United States instead of Canada, president Paul Pare said Wednesday.

Expansion in the U.S. is "a very live issue with us," Pare told reporters following the company's annual meeting, where the government's profit regulations were heavily criticized.

Expenditure of investment dollars in the U.S. by Canadian companies has been threatened increasingly because of higher wages and taxation in Canada and most recently because of anti-inflation guidelines.

The May federal budget which proposed corporate profits not exceed 85 per cent of last year's earnings has evoked harsh criticism from Imasco and other large companies.

In an open letter to Finance Minister Donald Macdonald to be published as full-page advertisements in five major daily newspapers, Imasco says:

"The budget told business, and specifically the manufacturing sector of business, that it would have to earn 15 per cent less margin of profit this year than last.

"We will earn many millions of dollars less because of this new law. How many millions we don't yet know."

Pare told shareholders that Imasco — a giant tobacco and food products company — could see its earnings reduced this year by 25 per cent from the 1975 level. While the company was forced to reduce its earnings by 15 per cent, costs including labor costs likely would increase by 10 per cent.

Pare said anti-inflation rules discriminate against business in favor of labor. Labor says it is the group facing discrimination.

The company's 1975 earnings after extraordinary items were $34.6 million or $3.54 a share compared with 1974 earnings of $36.8 million or $3.76 a share.

Sales were expected to increase this year about 10 per cent from the 1975 level of $941.2 million, which had increased from $843 million in 1974.

The first of the Imasco's advertisements, described as a "one-shot deal," appeared Wednesday. The campaign will cost about $15,000.

Pare said he hoped the advertisement will spark other large Canadian corporations to similar action.

He said several prominent business leaders across Canada had telephoned him expressing support for the advertisements.

Javelin must pay $1.35 million in suit

NEW YORK (AP) — Montreal-based Canadian Javelin Ltd. is to pay $1.35 million in cash to settle an investors' civil lawsuit alleging securities violations in 1969-73, a period of controversy over Panama and Newfoundland ventures.

The $1.35 million settlement won approval Tuesday from Judge Morris Lasker in U.S. district court. He noted that some objectors chose to continue lawsuits in Illinois federal and state courts.

Lasker found the settlement "fair and reasonable," although some claimants in the stockholder class action argued that damages should range from $30 to $50 million.

Lasker noted that two objectors to the settlement claimed that the pact let two company officials — executive committee chairman John Doyle and president William Wismer — escape accountability "while saddling the company with payment." The judge added that was a decision for the company to make.

The plaintiffs, beginning with two New York area women, Gertrude Bomine and Lillian Olden, who sued in December, 1973, claimed various securities laws violations in connection with a project for a linerboard plant in Newfoundland, eventually sold to the province after political disputes, and a copper venture in Panama, since acquired by Panama.

The two women alleged that Canadian Javelin statements or failure to disclose information artificially inflated the price of stock when they invested.

Lasker commented that lawyers for the company argued that they would have won on trial but settled "to avoid the expenses entailed in the conduct and preparation of a 'long, difficult and complicated' trial."

The judge said that those who suffered losses between April 30, 1969, and Oct. 24, 1973, would get "pro rata" shares in the settlement fund.

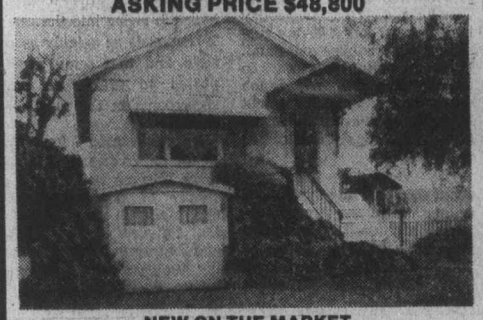

Trebell resigns

VANCOUVER (CP) — Frank Trebell has resigned as chairman and chief executive officer of Yorkshire Trust Co., the firm he formed in 1965 as the successor to businesses founded as far back as 1888 by a Yorkshire, England, family.

An announcement by the company Tuesday said Trebell plans to spend more time at his other interests, which include real estate activities.

Charles Wills has been elected chairman. He has been a director of Yorkshire Trust since its formation. Gerald McGavin, who has been president and general manager since last October, has been named chief executive officer.

Trebell came to Vancouver in 1965 after several years as general manager of investment dealer Greenshields Inc., in Montreal.

OLYMPIC REPORT

Soviet mill turns out Olympic crop

TSAKHKADZOR, U.S.S.R. (Reuter) — The Soviet Union's newest school for gold medalists has just given a rousing sendoff to the last batch of Olympic hopefuls who trained here for Montreal.

Situated in a quiet corner of Armenia known as the Valley of the Flowers, Olympic training centre provides vivid testimony to the priority Moscow gives to international sporting success.

Each of the 30 or more Soviet swimmers who this week took their Olympic oath at Tsakhkadzor has had four or five training spells at the centre over the last year, each lasting up to three weeks.

Their Olympic-sized pool, equipped with 10-metre diving board, is match by the facilities for gymnastics, boxing, football and 15 other Olympic sports.

"Our indoor sprint track is the biggest of its kind in the world," boasts one of the centre's directors, Hakov Gyevorkyan, as he points to a hangar-like building which extends for a full 250 yards.

The whole complex, with three hotels for 600 sportsmen, sportswomen and trainers, cost 7,800,000 roubles ($9.5 million) to build.

Its yearly budget comes to 1,300,000 roubles ($1.8 million) and includes the wages for a permanent staff of 260 administrators and hotel and maintenance workers.

Not that the expense is allowed to trouble the athletes themselves. The state and their state-sponsored clubs pick up the bill.

Together with the training they organize for Olympic team members, the centre's directors are aware of their duties as representatives of the Soviet state.

At the oath-taking ceremony, the swimmers lined up like soldiers on parade for pep talks from the local head of the Communist Youth League (Komsomol).

He told them their first duty was to the Soviet motherland and quoted Communist Party chief Leonid Brezhenev as saying that "a feeling of collectivism and comradeship" would help Soviet sportsmen to victory.

The oath was read on behalf of the team by its Komsomol leader, Soviet breaststroke champion Nadezhda Stavko, who pledged they would all strive to win "bravely, selfishly and fairly."

In the years between one Olympics and the next, this and other training centres are used to bring on new Olympic-class sportsmen and sportswomen.

Gyevorkyan says part of the process of selecting the team also takes place here.

Complete with its own medical centre and, surprisingly, a bar for 80 people, the centre was built in 1968 before the Mexico Games. Planners chose the site because it was at a similar altitude to Mexico City.

Officials insist that it was a relatively cheap venture by European standards and say smaller training camps built recently in such countries as East Germany have cost much more.

Yet to a visitor it seems no expense has been spared, an impression underlined by the smart appearance of the team themselves — the men in well-tailored maroon blazers, the women in red with grey knee-length skirts.

No special privileges

BROMONT, Que. (CP) — In the opinion of one British official, no special privileges will be afforded Princess Anne and her husband Capt. Mark Phillips when the British royal couple arrive here next week to take part in the Olympic equestrian events.

"The princess likes to be treated the same as any other competitor and we do everything we can to make that possible," said Col. Guy Wathen, a key figure with the British delegation here. "She'll live in the Olympic village like the other athletes.

Princess Anne won a spot on Britain's equestrian squad last week during the British Olympic trials, while Capt. Phillips gained a spot as an alternate.

Two team members protest judo choice

TORONTO (CP) — Two members of Canada's Olympic judo team, who said Tuesday they plan to protest to the Olympic selection committee the failure to pick light-heavyweight Chris Preobrazenski to the team, "have a perfect right to do so," says Howard Wheatley, vice-president of Judo Canada.

"They're talking it up for Chris. They're a friend of his so why shouldn't they," Wheatley said Wednesday. "They have a perfect right to do so."

The two—Wayne Erdman of Waterloo, Ont., and Brad Farrow of Delta, B.C.—said they plan to file a protest with the federation within two days, the dropping of Preobrazenski, of Toronto, as the No. 1 alternate on the team and the continued lack of support by the two governing bodies.

Erdman and Farrow said they would put in an official protest after the Olympic Games, starting in Montreal on July 17.

Preobrazenski, a double bronze medalist at the Pan-American Games in Mexico City last year, was dropped from the team last week for refusing to compete in the open division at the trials in Montreal.

"I was given the option of competing in the open category, but I said to hell with it," Preobrazenski said. "The category has just too many big boys. I'd make a fool of myself."

He had been replaced as a light-heavyweight representative by Joe Meli of Lethbridge.

Wheatley said it was the fighter's refusal to go in the open class at the Montreal tournament that resulted in him being chopped from the team.

"He signed up, but when his name was called he refused to compete," said Wheatley. The open division was the only spot still open on the team and was filled with Tom Greenway, another Lethbridge fighter, from the seven who competed. Only eight were invited.

EAST BERLIN (AFP) — Three East German men swimmers were injured in a road accident Wednesday and may miss the Montreal Olympics, the East German news agency, ADN, reported. Wolfram Sperling, winner of the breaststroke at the East German swimming trials in June, appeared to be the most seriously injured. The other two injured swimmers were Hartmut Floeckner and Lutz Loescher.

ATHENS, Greece (AFP) — An Olympic official arrived Wednesday with an electronic torch to beam the Olympic flame from here to Ottawa on July 15. Henri Biar of the International Olympic Committee also brought with him 540 oil torches to carry the flame from the Hera Temple in Olympia, Peloponesja, to Athens. The flame then will be transmitted by a coded energy signal by satellite to Ottawa and rekindled by a laser beam in a bowl set up at Parliament Hill.

MONTREAL (CP) — Chris Critelli of St. Catharines, has been added to the Canadian Olympic women's basketball team replacing Liz Silcott of Montreal, it was announced Wednesday.

Coach Brian Heaney said when evaluating 14 players he felt Critelli was more compatible and better suited to the team's style of play.

Russian official praises Village

MONTREAL (CP) — A senior Soviet official says day living quarters at Olympic Village are poorer than they have been at past Olympics, but added that the food is good and security adequate.

Speaking through an interpreter, Aidar Valiakhmetov, head of information for the Soviet government's sports committee, complained that his athletes are being housed eight to 14 in a room.

But he praised eating arrangements and the quality of food, saying the athletes were "very satisfied."

Valiakhmetov noted that the Olympic Village seemed well-guarded, but added that it remains to be seen at the conclusion of the Games how successful security measures are.

"If everything ends well, that will be the proof of their success," he said.

The athletes were not being hampered by the tight security, he said, adding that arrangements had been made for the Soviet swimming team to visit the Montreal Aquarium and the Museum of Fine Arts.

"The Soviet athletes are very interested in becoming acquainted with Montreal and its culture."

Michael Efimov, a Soviet press attache at the Olympic Village, said complaints about the village published in Moscow and attributed to Valiakhmetov were made by someone else before the Soviet delegation left for Montreal.

An article published in the newspaper Soviet Sport quoted Valiakhmetov as saying security regulations will restrict athletes' contact with the outside world.

"It is only a pity that this concern that they should be able to rest normally and peacefully will complicate the contacts of Olympic athletes with the outside world and will make difficult meetings with journalists and specialists," Valiakhmetov was quoted as saying in the article.

White Sox sign young pitcher

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago White Sox of baseball's American League announced Wednesday the signing of pitcher Steve Trout, the son of former major-league pitcher Paul "Dizzy" Trout. Trout, 18, was Chicago's No. 1 choice in last month's baseball draft. He was signed to a contract with the Sarasota White Sox of the Gulf Coast League.

Trout's father had a 171-160 lifetime record in 15 years as a major leaguer, most of them with Detroit Tigers. Following that, he worked for the White Sox in public relations from 1959 until his death in 1972.

Shamrocks outlast Adanacs with productive power-play

By JIM TANG

Victoria Shamrocks never quite lost the edge of a quick 7-1 lead Wednesday night in Memorial Arena but they toyed with the idea a number of times before coming away with an 18-15 conquest of Coquitlam Adanacs.

The Western Lacrosse Association leaders, now out front by seven points, made excellent use of power-play chances as they continued their yo-yo existence and made things interesting for the 1858 fans by always managing to pull out of their skids just in time.

With Ivan Thompson and Danny Green moving the ball around well and profiting from the chances, the Shamrocks scored seven times when they had the odd man. Their effective power play gave them their big early lead, and it also clinched the points.

In between, however, the Shamrocks seemed determined to keep things as exciting as they have managed to do in almost every game this season. They were 7-1 before the game was 11 minutes old, and then went into a lapse which was broken from time to time with well-taken goals just when it seemed Adanacs were finally going to make it to the front.

Ordinary goalkeeping, some bad penalties and some loose checking soon had the Shamrocks in trouble. Adanacs scored four power-play goals between 12:20 of the first period and 8:56 of the second to get to 6-8. But they were only to come close, and they did it often—at 8-9, 9-10 and 10-11 in the second period and at 13-14 in the third.

Each time it seemed the game had been turned, and each time the Shamrocks turned it back.

Larry Bell, the constant hustler, and Skip Chapman were the key men as the Shamrocks met the last serious challenge.

Bell, who had three goals and did all of his scoring in the last 22 minutes, delayed the Adanac surge in the third period with a goal at 6:21 which restored a three-goal lead. Then after the Adanacs had reached 13-14, Bell started and finished off the play which gave the Shamrocks a two-goal margin.

Chapman, who had relieved George Grover late in the second period, stopped a Coquitlam surge then, making four great stops in the space of less than two minutes to allow Shamrocks to stay at 16-13.

Although Rhys Parsons did cut the lead to two goals, that broke the Coquitlam charge and it was definitely over at 16:22 when Ray Durante drew a major penalty for spearing Norm Baker. Shamrocks made sure then, scoring two more power-play goals to zoom to 18-14.

Thompson, who was in on five power-play goals, led both clubs with nine points, seven of them assists. Joe McCrea had three goals and five assists, Ron MacNeil had three goals and three assists, and Dan Green a goal and six assists.

Kevin Parsons, with three goals and three assists, George Musseau, with four goals, and Rhys Parsons, with three goals and an assist, were the most-productive losers.

It was a Bland day Wednesday in the girls' division of the Pacific Northwest regional junior tennis championships, which concluded at the Racquet Club of Victoria.

Sisters Jennifer and Nina Bland won the singles titles in the under-16 and under-18 divisions, respectively, then teamed to win the under-18 doubles.

Nina Bland, second seeded in under-18s, scored the biggest upset of the day, downing top-seeded Brenda Cameron of the Racquet Club, 3-6, 6-1 and 6-2, while top-ranked Jennifer had her problems before defeating Karen Kettenacker of Vancouver, 1-6, 7-6, 6-4.

The Blands then scored a 6-4, 6-4 decision over Lori Barlow of Victoria and Jenny Grantham of Phoenix in the doubles final.

Two other Victoria girls scored singles victories, Val Bryce in the under-14 division and unranked Kelly Davies in the under-12s.

Miss Bryce stopped Lynn Bloomer of Vancouver, 4-6, 6-3, 6-3, while Miss Davies posted a 6-0, 6-4 decision over Vivian McAdam of Vancouver.

In the under-14 doubles, Miss Bloomer and Ruth Kilgour of Vancouver were 6-4, 6-1 winners over Miss Bryce and Grace McCully of Vancouver.

In the boys' division, top-seeded Steve Volrich of Vancouver had little difficulty scoring a 6-4, 6-1 decision over Gerald Clerx of Vancouver in the under-18 singles final. Volrich and Clerx then teamed for a 6-3, 6-2 victory over John Nichols and Mike Kerr of Vancouver in the under-18 doubles final.

Nichols stopped Arnold Kettenacker of Vancouver, 7-5, 6-0, in the under-16 singles final.

In the under-14 singles, Joseph Bedoya of Hawaii was a 6-4, 2-6, 7-6 winner over Laird Dunlop of Ottawa; and Rick Hunter and Tony Frost of Vancouver were 6-3, 6-2 winners over Steve Haqq and John Bowering of Vancouver in the under-14 doubles.

In the under-12 singles, Mike Young topped John Borchert, 6-2, 6-4, in an all-Vancouver final.

Czech leads cycle test

TROIS-RIVIERES, Que. (CP) — Milan Puzela of Czechoslovakia held the lead after the first stage of the Quebec Grand Prix cycling race Wednesday.

Puzela covered the 90-mile distance between Quebec and Trois-Rivieres in three hours, six minutes and 50 seconds and came in just ahead of four other competitors who finished with the same time.

A. Hessink of the Netherlands was second, Wokciech Matusiak of Poland was third, Mike Neel of the United States was fourth and Houwelingen A Van of the Netherlands was fifth.

There was some confusion at the end of the first stage as to which of the first five racers had crossed the finish line first. Finally judges issues the results showing Puzela on top.

Vladimir Vomdracek of Czechoslovakia was listed sixth, Stanislaw Szozda of Poland was seventh followed by Vastimil Moravec of Czechoslovakia, Ivan Popov of Bulgaria and Bill Nickson of Great Britain.

Tom Morris of Victoria was the best Canadian in the race, placing 14th after the first stage.

More than 80 cyclists, representing more than one dozen countries, left Quebec Wednesday in a sweltering 30-degree temperature on the first stage of the 450-mile event.

The five-stage race is to end Sunday at St. Zotique, Que., 45 miles southwest of Montreal and near the Ontario border.

In addition to the Canadian Olympic team, cyclists from this Quebec's A team, Australia, Bulgaria, Belgium, the United States, Britain, Holland, Italy, Jamaica, Poland, Czechoslovakia, the Soviet Union and Venezuela were entered in the fifth edition of the event.

'Caps obtain midfielder

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Whitecaps of the North American Soccer League have signed Wolfgang Suhnholz, a West German midfielder, who had been playing with the Boston Minutemen.

General-manager Denny Veitch said the deal involved an undisclosed amount of cash. Suhnholtz, 5-feet-10, 163 pounds, is a 29-year-old native of Berlin and played with Bayern Munich, Oberhausen, Tennis Borussia of Berlin and Grasshoppers of Zurich.

In Challenge Series

Haslam and Smith to resume rivalry

Roy Smith and Roy Haslam, two of Victoria's finest drivers, will renew acquaintances after nearly seven years next week when the International Drivers Challenge series makes two stops at Western Speedway.

Smith, who drives the Dick Midgely-owned 1976 Chevelle on the NASCAR circuit and has been at the wheel of the Daffodil Special supermodified in recent years, will be driving the No. 21 car, formerly handled by Gary Kershaw, Tuesday and Thursday — the fourth and fifth races on the seven-stop series for superstocks.

Smith, who competed in the Daytona 500 earlier this year, will start practice runs in the Harvey Chipper-owned 1969 Chevelle tonight.

In making his first appearance in the IDC superstock series, Smith will be in against some of the top drivers in the Pacific Northwest, including Haslam, the third-place finisher in last year's series.

Haslam, a veteran on the superstock circuit, has his 1965 Chevelle in top condition and will participate in all seven races, starting with the opener Friday night at Tacoma's Spanaway Speedway. The series continues Saturday at Skagit Speedway at Mt. Vernon, Wash., and Olympia's Tenino Speedway on Sunday before moving to Vancouver Island. Following Tuesday and Thursday races, the action switches to Yakima Speedway on July 17 and Portland Speedway on July 18.

Also entered are defending-champion Ron Eaton of Tacoma, veteran Hershel McGriff of Bridal Veil, Ore. — winner of 15 of 34 main events in the seven-year history of the series — Ernie Stierly of Portland, currently one of the hottest drivers in the Pacific Northwest, and NASCAR veteran Harry Jeffersonf of Naches, Wash., who will be making his first appearance on the IDC circuit.

Eaton has won eight of 11 NASCAR or open main events entered this year and should be the one to beat in his 1970 Nova.

However, there are a number of new drivers on the circuit this season and it should be one of the most closely-contested series.

Bryce Mann, present leader in the Can-Am superstock series, will be the first-ever driver from Saskatchewan to compete; Reg Kennedy of Surrey, 1975 Western Canadian NASCAR champion, will be here along with Eric Dowler of Edmonton, runner-up in the 1975 Canadian NASCAR series.

Other entries include 1974 IDC champion Ross Surgenor of Victoria, working hard to get his 1969 Cougar in race condition; the Becker brothers — Randy and Rick — from Highland, Calif., and Rick Parr of Port Angeles, the youngest driver in the IDC series last year at only 16.

Time trials for the two events here are at 7 p.m. with racing to follow at 8 each night.

Host girls nab titles

Gordon Head teams captured both divisions of the B.C. girls' Little League softball championships Wednesday at Majestic Park.

The Victoria girls scored seven runs in the fourth inning ad went on to a 10-3 decision over Dawson Creek in the Division I (13-15) final and finished with a 3-0 record. In the Division II (12 and under) final, Gordon Head posted a 9-4 victory over Dawson Creek to finish the three-team event with a 3-1 won-loss mark.

Sandy Allen scattered three hits to earn the victory in the Division I game while Val O'Brien allowed only four hits in winning the Division II contest.

Reds complete sweep with three-run rally

Mike Lum's sacrifice fly scored Cesar Geronimo with the winning run in the ninth inning as Cincinnati Reds completed a three-game sweep over Montreal Expos with a 4-3 victory in National League baseball action Wednesday night.

The Reds rallied from a 3-1 deficit when Joe Morgan and Dan Driessen led off the ninth inning with singles and Geronimo tied the game with a triple to right centre, chasing Expos starter and loser Steve Rogers, 2-7.

Dale Murray came in to face Lum and surrendered the game-winning stroke before getting pinch-hitter Johnny Bench to ground out and striking out Doug Flynn.

In other National League games, Chicago Cubs shut out San Diego Padres, 10-0; Los Angeles Dodgers edged Philadelphia Phillies, 6-5; San Francisco Giants beat St. Louis Cardinals, 3-2; Pittsburgh Pirates downed Atlanta Braves, 9-7; and New York Mets defeated Houston Astros, 12-4.

Manny Trillo's three-run homer highlighted a five-run third inning and Rick Reuschel pitched the Cubs' third consecutive shutout. Mike Schmidt's two-base error, his second of the game, let in the winning run as Los Angeles rallied for its win over the Phillies.

Darrell Evans slammed a lead-off home run in the top of the ninth inning to carry San Francisco past St. Louis. Manny Sanguillen drove home two runs with his first home run of the season as Pittsburgh beat Atlanta.

John Milner extended his hitting streak to 13 games with a double and a single to lead the Mets past Houston.

In the American League, Chicago White Sox downed Boston Red Sox, 6-3; Detroit Tigers edged Texas Rangers, 2-1; Minnesota Twins beat Milwaukee Brewers, 8-2; Kansas City Royals edged New York Yankees, 2-1 and California Angels edged Cleveland Indians, 2-0.

Nolan Ryan blanked the Indians on five hits and Bobby Bonds handled the offence with a home run and run-scoring double in the Angels victory.

At Detroit, hard-luck Bert Blyleven hit Ben Oglivie with a pitch with the bases loaded in the eighth inning and Rusty Staub followed with a sacrifice fly to give Detroit a pair of runs which proved enough for the Tigers.

Dave Lemanczyk and winner John Hiller, 7-4, blanked the Rangers until the ninth when rookie Steve Grilli pitched out of a bases-loaded jam with only one run scoring.

That, however, was the first run the Rangers scored for Blyleven, 6-10, during the first nine innings in any of his last four starts. He pitched a pair of 1-0 10-inning victories but was blanked in turn 1-0 in his last outing.

Japan's Young Hawk – Norio Suzuki

Parched British Open greens troublesome for big names

SOUTHPORT, England (Reuter) — Three unknowns on the international golf circuit threw down the gauntlet to the top stars Wednesday on the opening day of the British Open championships at the Royal Birkdale course.

The three, with three-under-par 69s, were lone Japanese contender Norio Suzuki, playing for the first time outside his homeland; Irishman Christy O'Connor and 19-year-old Spanish champion Severiano Ballesteros.

While the big names were picking their way over Birkdale's 7001-yard, par-72 layout as if they were treading in a minefield, the three leaders sparkled.

The sun-bleached Birkdale course, laced with tough willow scrub and a moonscape of hillocks and bunkers, caused plenty of problems when liberally mixed with Wednesday's shifting breezes.

Jack Nicklaus, the pre-tournament favorite, had to be satisfied with a 74. Johnny Miller and Hubert Green scrambled home at par while fellow American Tom Weiskopf had a 73 and defending-champion Tom Watson shot a 75.

Closest on the heels of the front runners were American Tom Kite, Australian Jack Newton and Britain's Brian Barnes, all with 70s.

Suzuki, 24, known back home as the Young Hawk, hit five birdies in seven holes from the 11th, including putts of about five and seven yards.

O'Connor, an Irish Ryder Cup player, was the first man to tee off and he lit the fuse for everyone else to try to stamp on. Except for a triple-bogey eight on the 505-yard 13th, he could have been the clear leader.

Ballesteros, due to join the Spanish army in three months, putted superbly, especially at the short 12th where he sank one from 30 yards.

Birkdale, 20 days without rain, was lighting fast and unpredictable. Many of the stars who looked good in practice failed to keep it up Wednesday.

But Kite, who only won his first tournament a month ago in the Philadelphia Classic, gritted his teeth to claim a share of second place.

"I like playing tough courses," said Kite. "There are too many easy courses back home. Here three or four under par really means something."

Newton, who had last year's British Open title snatched from his grasp in a playoff against Watson, played confidently despite an old ankle injury that soon will require surgery.

"I was down in the dumps before going off but took some painkilling pills and they just about lasted me out the four hours," said Newton.

Barnes, dressed for the heat wave in shorts, an unusual sight on a British course, was four over par after six holes. Then he staged a grandstand recovery which included an eagle three at the last hole with a 15-yard putt.

Nicklaus, bidding for his third British title, grumbled about the greens. "I played reasonably well most of the way. Every green was different and you never knew what the ball was going to do."

Miller matched par with the help of a 15-yard putt on the first hole but said: "I really putted very poorly."

Watson said: "I played bad from tee to green and I've got a lot of work to do before tomorrow."

One of the late finishers was Australian Graham Marsh who shot a 71 to join South African John Fourie and American Bill Brask in third spot. Gary Player of South Africa and Dutchman Jan Dorrestein and were at even par with Green, Miller and Bob Charles of New Zealand.

Weiskopf, the 1973 champ, launched a bitter attack on the greens which are browned by the drought and have some bald patches.

"This country seems to have been caught out by the heat," said Weiskopf. "The temperatures are as high or higher in other countries but there's a lack of knowledge here on how to deal with the greens.

"You get to be afraid to putt from 15 feet from the hole because you know you're probably not going to make it."

Sarazen drops out

SOUTHPORT, England (Reuter) — Gene Sarazen of the United States, dapper 74-year-old former champion, failed to complete the Royal Birkdale course on the first day of the British Open golf championship Wednesday.

Sarazen, winner in 1932, lost his ball off the tee at the ninth and said: "I just could not be bothered to go back and play another one."

At the British Open in 1973 at Troon, Sarazen gained renewed fame when he scored a hole in one.

Brush fire delays first-round play

SOUTHPORT, England (AP) — The first round of the British Open was interrupted for about 30 minutes Wednesday by a brush fire near the first green that shot flames as high as 20 feet in the air with billowing smoke that could be seen over most of the course.

The blaze, which took about 40 minutes to bring under control, at one time threatened the spectator stands to the left of the first green.

"The stands were about half full and were soon cleared, but there was no danger to anyone," said Superintendent Arnold Simpson, in charge of the Southport division of the Merseyside police department.

Fire engines have been stationed on the sun-scorched course, which has been called a tinderbox because it is so dry. Several fires broke out during practice rounds earlier in the week and fire officials have issued urgent appeals to be careful in the use of matches.

Sam Torrance of Britain, Johnny Miller of the United States and Jack Newton of Australia were putting on the first green when the fire broke out. They played out the hole. They were followed by Bob Shearer of Australia and Guy Hunt and Howard Clark of Britain, who had to dash through dense smoke and choking fumes—Clark with a towel over his head—after hitting off the second tee.

The next threesome, American Carl Higgins, Hugh Baiocchi of South Africa and D. Lovato of Italy, were held up off the first tee for about 30 minutes while firemen battled the blaze in a 15-foot deep gully that covered about 50 square yards.

Linebacker out

MONTREAL (CP) — Linebacker Carl Crennell will be lost to Montreal Alouettes for four to six weeks because of a shoulder injury suffered in the Alouettes Eastern Football Conference pre-season game in Ottawa Monday night. Crennell suffered a separated left shoulder in the contest, which the Alouettes won 26-22.

The grand-slam came in the fifth inning and concluded an eight-run rally which helped the first-place hotelmen to an 11-2 victory over Farmer Construction at Lambrick Park.

Squire, who had three singles in addition to the homer, also scored twice as the leaders took a one-game edge on second-place Greaves Movers.

Winning-pitcher Bob Mabee helped his own cause by scoring twice and driving in what proved to be the winning run.

In evening his record at 2-2, Mabee struck out six and allowed only one earned run.

Terry Painter was tagged with his fourth loss of the season as Farmers fell four games off the pace.

Suzuki wins following

He communicates in his own way

SOUTHPORT, England (AP) — Speaking English, Norio Suzuki would have trouble asking his way to the winner's circle. But that doesn't mean this talented and engaging young man can't communicate.

Another round of 69, such as he posted Wednesday, and this grinning, expressive Japanese is certain to become this year's "most delightful chap" at the British Open golf championship.

Talking about his 69 that gave him a three-way share of the first-round lead, he quickly won over the media with his quick and easy responses.

Told he had set a course record 34 on the par-38 incoming nine, he broke into a big smile, began jibbering excitedly in something that smacked of five per cent English, 95 per cent Japanese, and slapped his knee.

But when reminded of his bogey six on the 18th, which cost him sole possession of first place, he moaned — and slapped both knees.

Finally, the five-foot-seven, 145-pounder, whose favorite golfer is Gary Player because of their similar height, learned that Player had sat in the same interview seat only 15 minutes earlier.

"This seat?" he questioned, giving the chair a pat. Then he threw up both hands and leaned back in mock dismay.

Leaving Japan for the first time to play golf, the 24-year-old Suzuki brought an innocent quality to the Open. He is alone here, the only golfer from his country and one of the few Japanese ever to play in this tournament.

"He is young and he wants to get out in the world and explore," said Jack Sakazaki of Vidio Promotions, which is helping televise this tournament back to Japan for the first time. "He wants to play on the best courses against the best players and learn as much as he can about playing golf. Next year, he wants to go to the United States and play."

The son of a one-handicap golfer, Norio learned to play as a caddy at the Kijimakoan Country Club, where he received room and board and a little spending money. After six years as a caddy he turned pro four years ago and since has won six tournaments, ranking No. 6 on the Far East circuit last year with some $100,000 in winnings.

Ballard expects Leafs to leave

TORONTO (CP) — Harold Ballard, president of Toronto Maple Leafs, says that three players could be leaving the National Hockey League team because of contract disputes. Ballard said Ron Seiling and Dave Dunn, both defencemen, and forward Blaine Stoughton have all balked at new contracts.

"I'm not moving, so I guess they are," said Ballard. "Right out of a Leaf uniform."

Seiling, Dunn and Stoughton all became free agents June 1 along with several other Leafs. Scott Garland, George Ferguson and Brian Glennie have all either re-signed or agreed to new packages.

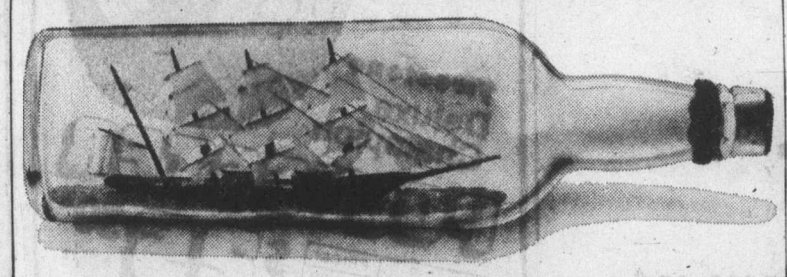

Ballard said he has been attempting to trade Dunn with the team most actively interested—California Seals. "California offered us cash for him," said Ballard. "I don't need the money. You can't play cash."

Seiling made about $160,000 a year on a three-year contract he began with New York Rangers. Ballard inherited the salary when he claimed Seiling for $30,000 two years ago. Ballard has offered Seiling between $90,000 and $100,000 on a two-year contract but doubts if the 31-year-old defenceman will accept. "I've heard through the grapevine he won't," said Ballard.

Getting Southwind into the bottle isn't easy.

It takes time to blend the Demerara, Barbados and other fine rums that go into Southwind.

Then more time to age Southwind in oak, to perfect maturity.

Southwind has the beautiful body you look for in a rum, but without the brawn.

It makes itself felt, but never intrudes, no matter how you mix it.

A traditional rum like this doesn't happen overnight. Although when served, it'll become an overnight sensation.

Southwind.
It didn't happen overnight.

City champ leads golf contingent

Victoria and District champion Dorothy DeGirolamo of Gorge Vale will lead a 12-member team to Vancouver on Sunday for the annual inter-city matches for the Huntting Cup.

Other team members are Dale Shaw of Glen Meadows, Shirley Naysmith of Gorge Vale, Joan Lawson of Uplands, Margaret Todd of Victoria, Heather Stewart of Uplands, Peggie Jacobsen of Glen Meadows, Jean Hopps of Uplands, Pat Derry of Royal Colwood and June Lovitt, Bea Breffitt and Maureen Hibberson, all of Uplands.

Jean Smith of Gorge Vale and Florence Chapman of Royal Colwood are spares.

Hockey registration opens

Oak Bay Minor Hockey Association will hold an open registration for players, 11-20 years of age, on Saturday at Oak Bay Recreation Centre from 9 a.m. until noon. Last year's players, not previously registered, have until Saturday to register to be sure of a place on a team. Players must be accompanied by a parent or guardian and new players are asked to bring a birth certificate. More information on the registration program can be obtained from Red Hamilton at 592-1190.

Lecuyer edges brother

LETHBRIDGE (CP) — Doug Lecuyer of Edmonton made no mistakes Wednesday as he won the Alberta junior golf title at Henderson Lake Golf Club.

"I made all my mistakes Monday," he said, commenting on his first round 84. "I didn't know the course and it showed."

Lecuyer, at 18 the defending Alberta amateur champion, didn't take long for him to establish himself as the top junior in the province despite his troubles Monday. Tuesday, he carded a one-over-par 71 with a 31 on the back nine and then capped his comeback with a one-under-par 69 Wednesday. He finished the three rounds with a 224 total, three shots better than his 16-year-old brother Gary.

Bob Kneilson of Medicine Hat and Calgary's Dan Cameron were deadlocked for third spot as each finished at 230. Kneilson had a final day 79 while Cameron was in at 75. Brent Keely of Edmonton finished at 231 after a 78 Wednesday.

U.S., Britain, France return to tennis fold—conditionally

MONT ECARLO (Reuter)—The United States, Britain and France, which withdrew last week from the 1977 Davis Cup, agreed to return to the competition Wednesday.

At the annual meeting of the International Lawn Tennis Federation, their delegates agreed to accept a one-year compromise on the question of political withdrawals.

All three countries had given notice that they would not enter next year's tournament when the Davis Cup nations meeting in London failed by a majority of three votes to pass a new rule suspending any country which entered the competition and then refused to play another team for political reasons.

The United States representatives said then that too much interference by governments was weakening the competition.

The ILTF passed a unanimous resolution Wednesday calling on the three countries to reconsider their decision.

Pablo Llorens, the president of the Royal Spanish Tennis Federation, said that 1977 would be considered as a neutral year in which every one of the Davis Cup nations would have a chance to consider the future course of the competition.

"If any new rule is needed, then all countries will have had a chance to consider the full implications of such a rule," Llorens said. "We believe the Davis Cup to be the most important international lawn tennis competition and the greatest source of publicity for the game.

"We urge the United States, Britain and France, as friends and upholders of the traditions of the game, to take this message to their national associations because we believe that this neutral year will save the competition."

American delegates said they believed the "neutral year" was the Davis Cup's last chance.

Stan Malless, the president of the USTA, commented after the meeting: "All nations are going to be put to the test. If they fail or their governments instruct them to withdraw for political reasons, they will be the ones who will be destroying the competition."

The United States, British and French decision last week to pull out of the competition followed a series of political withdrawals. In 1974, India refused to play in the final against South Africa and for the last two years Mexico has beaten the United States and then failed to play their match against the South Africans in the next round.

A resolution Wednesday calling for South Africa's expulsion from the ILAF failed to get anywhere near the required three quarters majority in a show of hands by delegates from the 58 countries present.

Canadian net stars disciplined

HALIFAX (CP) — The Canadian Lawn Tennis Association fined Dale Power of Toronto $150 Wednesday for his conduct during the final men's singles match in the Atlantic Open.

CLTA vice-president Donald McDougall said the tournament discipline committee found that Power made an obscene gesture to spectators at the end of his match Sunday against Rejean Genois of Quebec City. Genois defeated Power, 7-5, 5-7, 6-3.

The committee also said that on two different occasions during the match here, Power directed verbal obscenities at one of the linesmen. McDougall said Power won a total of $400 in prize money. The fine is to be paid to the junior development program of the CLTA.

The association reaffirmed an earlier decision to suspend Genois and Richard Legendre, of Montreal, from the next two doubles tournaments on the Canadian circuit.

The action was taken for what the CLTA described as "an obvious lack of effort by the Genois-Legendre team to win their first-round doubles match in the Atlantic Open."

The suspension will keep the two out of the doubles in the Quebec Open at Granby this week and the Ontario Open at St. Catharines next week.

Hockey pact

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Washington Capitals and Philadelphia Flyers have agreed to a joint working relationship with Springfield Indians of the American Hockey League. The two National Hockey League teams had a similar working agreement last year with the AHL Richmond Robins, who folded their operation last month.

Canada may lose tourney

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP — The International Softball Federation announced Wednesday that it is considering withdrawing the 1978 women's world softball championship from Canada if Canada's present policy on Taiwan is maintained. Taiwan (the Republic of China) has been a member of the softball federation since 1967 and has taken part in world championships from 1970. After the 1976 world championship in New Zealand, the ISF suspended Mexico and the Philippines for "political interference by governments." The Philippines has since been reinstated.

Limoli takes over lead in B.C. junior tourney

COQUITLAM (CP) — Joe Limoli fired a two-under-par 70 to take the lead Wednesday after 36 holes in the British Columbia junior golf tournament.

Limoli, an 18-year-old member of the host Vancouver Golf Club, blitzed the 6848-yard course on the front nine with a four-under-par 31. He stumbled on the back nine with three bogeys and one birdie but his round was still good enough for a two-stroke lead over Dick Zokol of Vancuver and Fred Couples of Jeff Park, Wash.

Zokol was tied for the lead after the first round with a 70 and added a 73 Wednesday for a 143 total.

Couples fired the day's best round over the rain-slicked course, a three-under-par 69. He navigated the front nine in par 35 and recorded the best back nine of the tournament when he shot 34, including an eagle three on the 13th hole.

Jim Rutledge of Victoria Uplands was alone in fourth place as he added a 75 to his first-round 70.

Aren Frederiksen of Nanaimo held down fifth place with a 147 total on rounds of 75 and 72, while Steve Chapman of Prince George was tied with Bruce Harper of Nanaimo, at 148.

The field was cut to the top 100 and ties for today's round and will be reduced to the top 50 and ties for the final round of the 72-hole event on Friday.

Twenty-six Vancouver Islanders made the cut of 165.

The blustery conditions and tougher pin placements played havoc with most of the golfers and most were between five and 10 strokes higher than their first round, played under sunny skies on Tuesday.

Scott Williams of Seattle, tied for the lead after the first 18 holes, slipped to an 81 from a 70. Dave Watt of Victoria Golf Club dropped to 82 from 73 and Russ Reynolds of Uplands fell to 81 from 74.

'Rookie' shares lead

MONTREAL (CP) — George Cornford of Calgary, a rookie in senior golf, shares the lead with Ed Ervasti from London, Ont., going into today's final round of the 54-hole Canadian senior's golf championship.

Cornford shot a one-over-par 73 Wednesday to go along with first-round 79 for a 36-hole total of 152. Ervasta, 62, shot a 77 in Wednesday's second round. Two shots behind the leaders is 1975 winner Merle Noyes, 62, of Port Colborne, Ont., and Calgary's John Poyne, 60, is another stroke back in fourth. Noyes shot a 76 Wednesday and Poyen, the defending champion in the event, shot a 78.

Tied for fifth spot are John Kisilenko of Monhreal and Al Cassidy of Toronto with 156 totals. Kisilenko shot a 77 and Cassidy had a 76 in second-round play.

Softball roundup

Seaboard back on top in hurry

Seaboard Construction didn't waste any time getting back on top of the Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League.

Bounced to second by Royal Oak Sporting Goods on Tuesday, Seaboard moved one point in front Wednesday by topping Mike's Sports Shop, 7-4, at Central Park. In another game, Ingraham Hotel downed last-place Matthews Heating, 6-1, at the same site.

Catcher Paul Morrison was the big gun for Seaboard, driving in three runs with a two-run single in the first inning and a fifth-inning sacrifice fly.

Pete Devana, with relief help from Phil Berry in the sixth inning, earned the victory.

Losing-hurler Bob Fletcher drove in two runs with a seventh-inning single.

In the other game, Randy Jackson scattered five hits in earning the win and Gord Rutherford cracked a two-run homer.

In the Victoria Senior Women's League, Stockers North Americans boosted their first-place margin to six points with a 7-2 win over CJVI Vicettes and Hygrade Radio downed Ingraham Hotel, 7-3, at Hyacinth Park.

Sharon Ferrill allowed only two hits in picking up the win for Stockers.

In the Heywood Men's League, Dick Michaud allowed only three singles, two in the final inning, in pitching Capital Builders to a 3-0 win over Taylor House Moving at Heywood Avenue Park.

And in the Sidney Men's League, Barry Underwood slammed a three-run homer to help KOA to a 7-1 victory over Sidney Hotel at Sanscha Park.

Roadrunners nip J-Hawks

COQUITLAM (CP) — A goal with two seconds left lifted Richmond Roadrunners to a 16-15 win over Coquitlam J-Hawks in Western Canada Junior Lacrosse League action Wednesday night.

Dave Cochrane scored the winner, as well as two other goals and an assist. Joe Morrello tied the game at 15-15 on a short-handed, unassisted goal.

The J-Hawks led 14-8 going into the final period.

Other top scorers for Richmond were Len Ciminelli with four goals and one assist, and Rico Bellusci and Willy Hutchison who each scored twice. Leading scores for Coquitlam were Dan Tickner with three goals, and Erik Otterstrom, Wayne McAuley and Colin Broomfield each with two.

Board to probe jail work dispute

A three - man arbitration board is to be appointed soon to settle a work schedule dispute between the provincial government and 1,110 correctional institute employees, a spokesman for the Government Employees' Union said Tuesday.

The employees work at a number of correctional institutes including Wilkinson Road jail and forestry camps on Vancouver Island.

BCGEU staff representative John Hurren said the dispute involves rescheduling of shifts in the institutes in line with the 35-hour work week introduced in the union's master contract effective April 1.

Both sides agreed to binding arbitration by the board.

ENTERTAINMENT GUIDE

BUTCHART GARDENS ADMITTING GATES OPEN EVERY DAY, 9 A.M. TO 11 P.M. — Many pleasing features combine to add to your pleasure. Gosley as aspiring violinist

Smile Show slicked

By JIM GIBSON
Colonist Reporter

They've slicked up the Smile Show and the whole effect is one of a well-oiled variety night. No snags, plenty of gags (?) and only occasionally does it drag.

While it is diverting enough, the show has little of the outrageous fun that characterized and saved last season's effort.

Jerry Gosley himself comes closest to that irresistible madness in a solo as an overripe female violinist trying to woo the affections and critical approval of symphony conductor Laszlo Gati. Some of the old fun, ironically, a sendup of past shows, comes with Gosley's Queen Victoria repeatedly trying to make her royal descent from the flyers only to be told, 'Sorry, not this year.'

The show provides the right balance of nostalgia in songs from wartime Britain and old Yankee favorites in the Bicentennial salute which includes some new naughtiness for the Smile Show from Steve Ivings' Groucho Marx.

And there's more of the English music hall flavor, thanks to solid Art Budd.

Even the dancing seems less affected, undoubtedly due to the return of Sylvia Hosie who leads the way through some snappy dance routines — some borrowed from her associations with Feux Follet and the Charlottetown Festival.

And the leggy, Lana Check exudes glamor with every step on stage.

The mini-skits keep the show moving along up to a point but need to be sharper. While running gags add some continuity, surely some topic other than suicide might have been jollier.

But there are really no high points to the show by virtue of its having no single strong performer among the uniformly-competent cast. Gosley plays the host and it is in this role that he is the most ineffective.

Al Demoni and his two musicians get a big McPherson-filling sound but it is wrong to blame them for drowning out some performers. An upbeat production like the Smile Show needs performers who can really belt out a song and not an orchestra that hides that fact.

If clothes make the man, surely sets make the show. Anton Gosley dresses up the show with some first-class pleasing sets.

Barbecuing Hints:

- Always read manufacturers directions for using barbecue before starting to use.
- Always do barbecuing in the open air
- Allow adequate time for briquettes to reach desired cooking temperature. They should be an ash-grey colour.

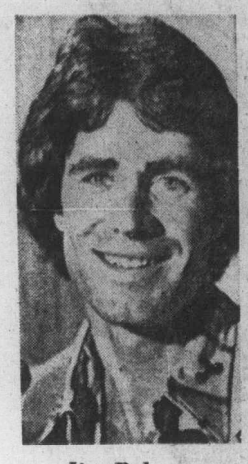

As a rough temperature guide, hold your hand, palm down, above the coals and count in long seconds . . ." one-second one, two-second two, etc." If you can keep your hands over coals for no longer than two seconds, the coals are hot (about 400 degrees F) if you can keep your hands there 3 to 4 seconds, the coals are medium hot (about 350 degrees F) 4 to 5 seconds, the coals are at a low heat (about 300 degrees F).

Oriole ace blasts selection of Hunter by AL manager

BALTIMORE (AP) — Jim Palmer of Baltimore Orioles, passed over for this year's American League all-star pitching staff, says Boston Red Sox manager Darrell Johnson made "some ridiculous appointments" to the team.

Jim Palmer
. . . sharply critical

"It's a little upsetting that this is the way the all-star pitchers are chosen. I think this may be the reason the National League wins every year," said the two-time Cy Young Award winner.

Palmer went on to call Johnson "an idiot" for selecting three relief pitchers among the nine-man bullpen.

Johnson, when asked about Palmer's statement, said: "Who cares. I certainly don't."

Johnson said American League president Lee MacPhail, and the managers who will work the all-star game — Cleveland manager Frank Robinson and Minnesota manager Gene Mauch, discussed the selections prior to the announcement.

Palmer, 10-7, with an earned-run average of 3.10 this season, has an identical won-lost record as Yankee pitcher Jim "Catfish" Hunter, who was selected for the all-star team. Bott pitchers have five 20-game seasons to their credit.

Joining Hunter on the American League pitching staff will be Detroit Tigers' rookie sensation Mark Fidrych, Frank Tanana of California Angels, Bill Travers of Milwaukee Brewers, Dave LaRoche of Cleveland, Luis Tiant of Boston, Rollie Fingers of Oakland A's, Rich Gossage of Chicago White Sox and New York Yankees' Sparky Lyle.

"The major error he (Johnson) made was naming Hunter," Palmer said. "If he names Hunter, why didn't he name Palmer? I don't really think I deserve to go because there are a lot of other guys who are having better years."

"I think he named Hunter from his past records. If he checks lifetimes and who won Cy Young Awards, he'll find I've won more and had a better year last year. I suppose if he deserves to go, then so do I," he said.

Hunter agreed that he didn't deserve the all-star assignment.

"I was picked for the team so I'll be there," Hunter said. "I don't know why I was picked, I don't have that good a record."

Both Palmer and Hunter won 23 games last year. But Palmer, who won the Cy Young Award, had only 11 loses while Hunter had 14. Palmer also received the Cy Young in 1973.

Also passed up by Johnson was tse Orioles' Wayne Garland, whose 9-1 record equals Fidrych's mark.

Johnson said that if Gossage, who has missed the last three games because of arm trouble, wasn't able to pitch Wednesday, he'll replace him on the squad.

"And my first alternative is not Mr. Palmer," Johnson said. "It's Wayne Garland."

Johnson said under league rules every team must be represented on the all-stars. That's the reason he picked Gossage and chose to pass over Pat Dobson of Cleveland, Dennis Leonard and Doug Bird of Kansas City Royals as well as Gaylord Perry of Texas Rangers. Tiant, he said, was chosen by McPhail.

Brett and Lynn head AL voting

NEW YORK (AP) — Kansas City third baseman George Brett, the American League;s leading hitter, and Boston outfielder Fred Lynn, the league's Most Valuable Player and Rookie of the Year last year, are among the eight starters named Wednesday to the AL team for Tuesday's baseball all-star game.

Brett and Lynn will be joined in the starting lineup by catcher Thurman Munson of New York Yankees, first baseman Rod Carew of Minnesota Twins, second baseman Bobby Grich of Baltimore Orioles, shortstop Toby Harrah of Texas Rangers and outfielders Ron LeFlore and Rusty Staub, both of Detroit Tigers.

The top players at each position were announced Wednesday by baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn after a record 8,370,145 fans participated in the balloting for the seventh straight year. The nationally-televised 47th all-star game will be played Tuesday night at Philadelphia.

Brett, hitting .354 through games of Tuesday, was an easy winner at third base, polling 1,873,481 votes to 1,315,602 for runner-up Don Money.

Ruth playdowns start Saturday

Four city Babe Ruth 13-year-old all-star baseball teams open playoffs this weekend at Lambrick Park in the District 3 tournament.

The double-loss elimination event, hosted by Gordon Head Cosmopolitans, begins Saturday and continues through next week.

First-round matchups pit Cosmos against Saanich Evening Optimists at 1 p.m. Saturday and Esquimalt-Victoria against Layritz at 5 p.m.

First-round losers meet Sunday at 1 p.m. while Saturday's winners play Sunday at 5 p.m.

Games Monday and Tuesday begin at 6:15 p.m. and if an extra game is needed to determine a champion, it will be played Wednesday, also at 6:15 p.m.

The tournament was reduced to four teams from five this week when a shortage of players forced Saanich Peninsula of Sidney to drop out.

The winner advances to the B.C. 13-year-old finals at Trail July 24-28.

Ethiopian runners ready

ADDIS ABABA (Reuter) — Ethiopia's long distance runners look certain to be among the winners at Montreal for the fourth successive Olympics.

The marathon has been the favorite sport here since the late Abebe Bikila ran barefoot round the Rome stadium in 1960 to take the gold.

He won top prize again at Tokyo four years later, but died nearly three years ago of a brain hemorrhage resulting from a 1969 car crash.

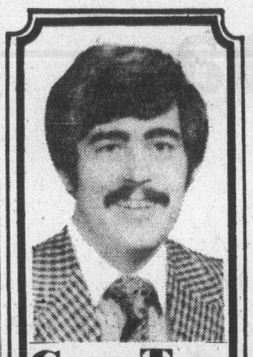

Mamo Wolde won Ethiopia's third gold, in Mexico, but could manage only a bronze at Munich. This year's competitors are a new young breed.

Gebre Gurmu, 29, is new to international sport but athletics coach Negussie Roba rates him among the best marathon men in the world.

In a 20-kilometre trial recently, Gegre blocked 58 minutes 32 seconds. Abebe's best time was just over an hour.

Tadesse Tsetergachew, 27, has a little more experience that Gebre, while Dereje Nedi, 22, has youth on his side.

The trio showed their potential when they came in first, second and third in the recent East and Central African championships in Zanzibar.

CLOTH TALK
Peter George

Have you wondered what the men's fashion scene will show for the fall season? While mass market trends do not develop overnight, the top designers are showing leadership in fabric selection.

There is a renewed interest in gabardine suitings. It is the ideal vehicle to illustrate tailoring detail. The colours are the traditional shades of brown, beige, and blue. The European market has swung heavily to gabardine, and we suspect that North America will also move in that direction.

Vested suits will remain popular. The vest complements the neat look of tailored gabardine garments. Fashion-conscious males will likely consider the option of colour-coordinated vests.

There also has been much effort expended in the development of a double-knit which will hold its tailored shape. A much finer cloth is presently being introduced which will resist the traditional sagging-and-bagging problem. We predict that the practicality of double knit will ultimately prevail.

Another interesting product is the "ultra-suede" fabric. It is now being used in casual leather-look jackets which cannot be distinguished from hide. We have also been impressed with a top-coating cloth in this material which is amazingly similar to a fine capeskin.

Judy Holm: Rare breed of high-fashion model

—CP

Rarely on television or in ads

This model's forte is the show

By JUDY CREIGHTON

TORONTO (CP) — The public rarely sees high-fashion model Judy Holm on television, in catalogues or, for that matter, in national advertisements wearing ready-to-wear garments.

Judy is one of the rare breed in the profession whose forte is "the show" — whether she is prancing down the runway in a glittering hotel modelling French imports or being fitted in a haute-couture salon in Toronto or Montreal.

"I'm too tall at 5 feet 11 inches," she said in an interview. "I take size 8 to 10 but I'm so army and leggy and I don't possess that classic type of beauty. I'm really a bit of an odd-ball."

Yet in two years, Judy has become one of Canada's most sought-after models by designers and the fashion industry alike.

She started in the business "pretty late," at 24, but for the last eight months her calendar has been full of assignments.

"In my first year of modelling, my earnings were definitely below the poverty line. But since last January, if I earned as much annually, I'd be grossing $20,000 to $25,000."

Modelling is a piecemeal business and offers stability only to the successful. As a result, many of Canada's top models escape to other cities such as New York, Paris and Rome to avoid overexposure.

This doesn't worry Judy.

"Because of my height, the only clothes that really fit me well are the expensive designs which invariably are seen in fashion shows."

As a result, she appears in most haute-couture presentations such as the recent Montreal Mode and the annual Holt Renfrew show in Toronto.

As a teen-ager, Judy was painfully shy" so she and her sister enrolled in a modelling school not so much with modelling aspirations but to improve their appearance.

It wasn't until almost 10 years later that Judy turned her training into a profession after attending university, office work, waiting on tables and hitch-hiking across Canada.

When she did walk into a modelling agency, the owners took one look at her and said: "Where have you been all this time?"

Judy took a refresher course and started the climb up the ladder of success.

Her graceful, willowy figure and walk have been enhanced by several years training with the Toronto Dance Theatre.

And she credits the gruelling discipline of the dance for the fact that after the birth of her son Erin, now 4, her stomach muscles were flat in five days.

At home, she indulges in a sideline — crocheting T-shirts which she sells to several Toronto boutiques.

She rarely wears makeup except while on the job and leads a "life of mederation." She eats almost everything and say that she keeps her figure trim by a lot of moving around.

"And I play baseball and tennis and swim."

Judy said the modelling business varies between Montreal and Toronto.

"Here it is a cut-and-dried business, but in Montreal it's more of a social, chic thing. I can only take one night of their disco, loud music and drinking."

However, Judy likes to work in both cities although she takes a cut in pay when in Montreal.

"And you really work your heart out for $10 less an hour. In Toronto I make $45 an hour for a show and $40 for photography sessions."

She urged that young women planning a modelling career select a training agency carefully.

"Never trust anyone in an agency who says they'll get you work as soon as you finish the course. And a good model must be awake and understand style."

Give your family our best.

ann landers

Dear Ann Landers: My husband has been impotent for the past five years — which means no sex whatever. Being a loyal and highly principled woman, I could not bring myself to cheat on him. So — I haven't had any sex either. Will you please educate your male readers who are in the same boat as my husband?

A wife can live without sex, if her man can't perform, but she cannot live without affection. The very least a husband can do is hold his wife in his arms and tell her he loves her.

I have never made one unkind remark to him about his inability to perform. I know it must bother him terribly and I don't want to add to his unhappiness. But don't you think I am entitled to some consideration? It would take so little for him to make me feel wanted and loved.

I have asked my husband to go to a doctor but he refuses. He comes home from work, eats dinner (reading a newspaper at the table) and proceeds to get drunk. This goes on seven nights a week. I need some help. — Withering On The Vine

Dear W.: You sure do, honey. Why did it take you five years to write?

My advice is talk to a counselor and learn the relationship between male impotence and alcholism. There's a definite link. Next join Al-Anon and get a new outlook on YOUR life. Al-Anon is as near as your phone book.

Many impotent husbands make their wives feel wanted and loved. Yours could, too, if he didn't get bombed every night. That's the problem.

Dear Ann Landers: Are there other mothers like me? I just don't dare leave my two boys (aged three and four) with a babysitter. We take them everywhere — vacations, trips, etc.

My husband now says he would like a nice vacation ALONE with just me. We haven't been anywhere, just the two of us, in four years, although we have gone to some nice places with the children.

P.S. They always sleep in the room with us. I feel safer that way. What do you think? —Mom With A Capital M

Dear Mom: I think you are heading for Trouble with a capital T.

If you believe you're doing your children a favor — forget it. There's a difference between "mothering" and "smothering."

Your children need to learn how to get along without you for a few days and your husband deserves your undivided attention on occasion. So get with it, kiddo, before you damage the entire family with your lopsided notion of "togetherness."

Matilda Australia anthem

MELBOURNE (CP) — The folk song Waltzing Matilda has been associated with Australia for more than 80 years, but for the first time it will be played officially at an international event this year. The song about a sheep-stealing tramp will be Australia's signature tune at the Olympic Games in Montreal.

Australia has been a participant in every Olympic Games since the modern Games started in 1896 and God Save the King or God Save the Queen have always been played in connection with its participation. But because this has been Britain's national anthem too, there has been some confusion.

When the Australian government conducted a survey in 1974 to determine the popular choice for a replacement anthem, Waltzing Matilda came a poor second to Advance Australia Fair.

Advance Australia Fair then became the anthem for all occasions except those associated with the Crown, when God Save the Queen is used. However, after a change of government last December, the new prime minister, Malcolm Fraser, made it plain that he favored Waltzing Matilda.

Following his public support, the Australian Olympic Federation adopted Matilda for the Montreal Games.

The tune is possibly based on a British song, The Bold Fusiliers, sung by troops during the early 18th century. But there are a number of views on its origin.

The Australian bush poet Andrew (Banjo) Paterson wrote the words about 1895, basing them on an incident on a cattle station in Queensland in which a man stole a sheep and drowned while fleeing from the police.

Over the years, Matilda became popular and was accepted, both in Australia and abroad as a national song. The words are couched in the hush idiom of the 1890s.

A jolly swagman (tramp) camps by a billabong (pool) under a coolibah (eucalyptus tree), singing "You'll come a-waltzing Matilda with me" (come wandering through the bush).

He grabs a passing jumbuck (sheep) and stuffs it in his tuckerbag (food sack), where it is found by the squatter (owner of the cattle station) and the troopers (mounted police). Seeking to avoid arrest, the swagman jumps into the billabong and drowned.

Munich claims win in staging Games

By SCOTT THORNTON

MUNICH (Reuter) — As the countdown begins for the Montreal Olympics, sports officials and administrators here say Munich has emerged a winner from staging the Games four years ago.

Their verdict, after drawing up a balance sheet of the 1972 Olympics:

The Games, at that time the mostly costly ever held, were expensive but the burden has been bearable and this pretty Bavarian capital now has a magnificent sports and recreation centre, which is being put to good use by its citizens.

"The Olympics have left us many long-standing benefits and we have never regretted having them here," says Werner Goehner, director of the company which runs the Olympic sites. "No Olympic venue has been more successful than Munich."

The Olympic complex, the biggest in Europe, has its problems, however. Officials are concerned at the lack of events attracted to the rowing centre and horse-jumping stadium, several miles from the main area.

At least 300 flats in the former Olympic Village stand empty for want of tenants or buyers.

The central site, a massive 200-acre park dominated by the imposing acrylic glass tent roofs and towering steel pylons of the main stadia, is still being subsidized by the Munich city government at the rate of around two million marks ($750,000) a year.

"But you must remember what we get for this," said Mayor Georg Kronwitter. "Munich now has sports and leisure facilities which are among the best in the world."

The Munich Games cost a total of 1.97 billion marks, of which 1.35 billion marks was for the stadia and other permanent infrastructure, Olympic officials say.

Some 627 million marks had to be paid out by West German taxpayers on the federal, state, and local levels. Munich and Bavaria each had to find 154 million marks from taxation.

Goehner said the Olympic park has been visited since the end of the 1972 games by more than 17 million visitors and sightseers at almost 500 events.

The 78,000-capacity Olympic Stadium, the home of European soccer champions Bayern Munich, drew a total crowd of more than 5.3 million up to the end of May.

The Olympic Park Co., responsible to the Munich city government, also controls the 13,000-capacity indoor stadium where Muhammad Ali defenced his world boxing crown in May, the indoor athletics hall, five-pool swimming stadium, 5,500-seat cycle stadium (the interior of which is also used as four all-weather tennis courts), ice arena, regatta course and the 900-foot television tower topped by a revolving restaurant.

A staff of 230 looks after the park, transformed into a rural haven of rolling hills and lakes from an old military airfield and army exercise area. To sculpture the hills, architects partly used the ruins of war-bombed houses.

On weekends, the decoratively landscaped grounds, with their neatly arranged tree groves, gardens and lawns, are enjoyed by thousands of picnickers, strollers, bathers and boaters.

"This is a real attraction in Munich," said Goehne. "The infrastruction for this area, like the subways, railways and a freeway which has become a main traffic artery, would never have been built but for the Olympics."

Across an eight-lane highway stands the mass of white and grey concrete blocks that formed the Olympic Village, scene of the Arab guerrilla attack on the Israeli team which led to 17 deaths.

Flats that housed women athletes among the 12,000 competitors are used by Munich University students and the "press city" has been turned into two schools.

Prospective buyers have been deterred by stiff prices for the small flats, mostly attractively laid out with terraced gardens. Purchase price of an apartment ranges from 46,000 to 314,000 marks.

Canada's new warships are corvettes in name only

By TOM MCDOUGALL

HALIFAX (CP) — Canada's new breed of warships will be classed as corvettes, reviving the spirit of the ungainly little Second World War craft that earned Canada a reputation as the West's most formidable hunter and killer of enemy submarines.

The new ships, the first of which are expected to go into service in 1982, are only in the preliminary stages of planning and no one knows exactly what they will be like.

But indications are they will be corvettes in name only, looking and performing much the same as the familiar helicopter-carrying destroyers that are the backbone of Canada's present naval force.

At about 3,000 tons displacement they are expected to be about twice the size of their Second World War namesakes. In fact, the hull design seen as most likely to be selected is identical to that of Canada's second-largest class of destroyers — the Annapolis and Nipigon.

They will be a far cry from the uncomfortable and unsightly vessels that helped win the Battle of the Atlantic by protecting convoys from the German U-boats that threatened to sever the lifeline between North America and Europe.

They were highly manoeuvrable and inexpensive. They were also small enough to navigage the St. Lawrence River, enabling every shipyard in Canada to build them in large numbers. Eventually, about 90 were built in Canada, of which Janes Fighting Ships of 1944-45 says eight were lost in action.

Life aboard such small ships was cramped, uncomfortable and not for men prone to seasickness.

They were bargain-basement warships with no luxuries. Sometimes not even guns, according to one post-war yarn.

The story goes that the first corvettes sent to Britain were pressed into service so quickly that there was no time to arm them with deck guns. Lest the Germans learn of this weakness, the navy painted telephone poles black and placed them on the gun mounts.

After the war the navy quickly disposed of the corvettes. Today the only one left is the Sackville, which has been converted to the peaceful role of research ship. Since the early '50s Canada has based her naval strength mainly on destroyers.

Vice-Admiral Douglas C. Boyle, head of Maritime Command, said the revival of the corvette will not change Canada's present naval role.

"The job is surveillance and protection of sea lines of communication," he said. "That's our traditional role."

That role had become more important than ever because the Soviet Union has 350 submarines. Possible declaration of a 200-mile control zone off Canada's shores would also emphasize the surveillance role.

The new corvettes will have all the anti-submarine characteristics of destroyers, updated by modern technological advances, Admiral Boyle said.

They will be ideal for patrolling the fisheries because their electronic anti-submarine detection equipment enables them to collect 20 times as much information in a single patrol as simple fisheries patrol boats do.

The admiral sees the Annapolis-Nipigon hull as the most likely design for the new corvette because it is highly manoeuvreable and seaworthy and because using an existing design saves on cost.

Despite external similarities, the corvette will be "very, very different" internally from the destroyers.

"We have listed all the things we think it has to have in it to do the job that we see in 10 years time . . . At the moment indications are we can get that into a hull around the 3,000-ton mark, the size of the Annapolis and Nipigon."

The corvettes will be introduced one at a time as each of the older destroyers is retired so the size of the navy will not change.

Admiral Boyle says the name corvette was chosen for psychological reasons.

"We want to indicate that we're thinking of the most cost-effective design that can do the job. In other words, it's as small as can do the job properly."

In fact, he said, the corvettes would be somewhat larger than most of the current destroyers. After listing all the equipment needed, "we just can't get it in a ship that's any smaller."

Busy weekend of shows

Terry wins mini-hunter classic

By MARILYN McCALL

Broadmead Equestrian Centre held an open horse show and mini-hunter classic on the Dominion Day holiday. Linda Townley, from Thunderbird Equestrian Centre, judged the hack classes, and then, along with Fred Ball and Joanne Orchard, formed a panel of three judges to judge the mini-hunter classic.

Equitation 13 to 18 was won by Aimee Shold, and equitation 12 and under was won by Cathy Newman. Pat Newman, riding Sidrita, won both working hunter under saddle and hunter hack. Both show hack and Arab-English pleasure were won by Mrs. C. C. Carpenter riding Kelvin Heather. Lillian Hawkins riding Moon Shadow, won amateur owner hunter under saddle. First in English pleasure went to Debbie Leier on Keepsake. The junior working hunter class was won by Aimee Shold on Alimay's Dream. Judy Ross, riding Tivesso, was first in thoroughbred under saddle.

Buckerfield's donated a cooler to the winner of the mini-hunter classic. The winner of the cooler was Terry Hanna, who rode Solo Flight to first place. Second place in the classic went to Judy Ross and Tivesso.

Marion Smith of Delta, judged an open horse show at Oak Meadows over the weekend. Judy Ross, riding Shot O'Glory was the aggregate winner, winning the first division of road hack, hunter under saddle 5 years and under, and working hunter under saddle 15'3" and under. For her wins, Judy received a trophy donated by the Circle E Tack Shop.

The second division of road hack was won by Wendy Thompson on Sunshine Casey. Mellanie Holland, riding Whisper Jet, won open equitation. Riding Radio Hill, Karen Olsen was first in show hack. Working hunter under saddle, over 15'3" was won by Alison Gladwell on Friendly Persuasion. Debra Burr, on Charisma, won thoroughbred under saddle. Riding Billy Cox, Lisa Stevenson won hunter hack. The jumper 2'6" class was won by Trudy Lancelyn on Rash-A-Mar. In working hunter 2'6"-3', Mary Fletcher and Wishful Thinking were first. Mellanie Holland, riding Tonka Toy, won equitation hunt seat. The conformation hunter class was won by Karen Brynelsen on Whisper Jet. Aimee Shold, riding Alimay's Dream, won working hunter 3'3"-3'6".

Pam Lenko of Duncan judged the pony show at Oak Meadows. Kitty Bell, riding Tic Toc, won the aggregate, winning equitation 12-16, jumper 26", and equitation hunt seat 12-16. Riding Paper Moon, Tracy Madsen won working hunter and equitation hunt seat 11 and under.

Working hunter under saddle was won by Meridye Starck on Miss Mooch. Kirstin Harkness, on Little Miss Muffet, won equitation 11 and under. First in English pleasure went to Tina Felix on Aidan Star. Rosamund Wright and Chimo won hunter hack.

Carolyn Wheatcroft, of Victoria, judged the Triangle Riding Club VIHC point show held at Coombs over the weekend.

The junior B performance aggregate went to Janice McAllan and Silver, who won stock saddle seat. Western pleasure was won by Shawna Hett on Miss Meleta. Penny Gauthier riding Glen-Tenna-Gay won trail. Sharon Szepat and Gypsy B won reining.

The junior A performance aggregate went to Lori Larsonu who rode Trouble's Blond to first in stock saddle seat, western pleasure, and reining. Jordan Hett and Tadpole Boy won the trail class. Linda Sheffield on Buck won the senior aggregate, winning western reining. Jess Sinclair, on Skip's Salty Jo won stock saddle seat. Westerrn pleasure was won by Wayne Sadzak on Vic Wahluke. In trail, Jackie Kral and Nifty were first.

Carrie Bowman and Vixen were the English aggregate winners, winning English pleasure. Show hack was won by Robbie Thornton on Fadjin Imp. Riding Vic Wahluke, Angela Sadzak won road hack. The hunter hack class was won by Cathy Hall on Pardon Me.

The junior B games aggregate was won by Janice McAllan on Silver. This pair won pole bending, stake race, scurry race and barrels. Hope Irvin and Lady Gay won the flag race.

The junior A games aggregate went to Rod Rimmer who rode Ali Kat to first in stake race, scurry race, and barrel race. Shirley Gamble and Shorty won pole bending. The flag race was won by Howie Thomas on King Christopher.

Doris Pitman, on Cowboy, won the senior games aggregate, winning stake race and barrels. Gary Massey, riding Apache, won pole bending. Riding Peggy Cold Steel, Alan Nikirk was first in the flag race. The scurry race was won by Dunc Rimmer on Buckshot.

M. V. Chesnut's Garden Notes

The newcomer to gardening seems to have the idea that the only time to plant anything in the garden is in the spring of the year.

Certainly the garden shops and centres foster this idea, for about the only time you see seeds, roots and shrubs advertised to any great extent is in spring and early summer — probably because this is when the gardening fever is running its highest temperature.

Yet almost all our trees and shrubs do as well when bought and planted in the fall as in the spring, and quite a surprising number of our plants actually prefer a fall planting.

There are a few kinds, toonotably the Oriental poppy, the Madonna lily and the bearded iris — which are best bought and planted in late midsummer!

Regarding the iris, there are still far too many of the old, inferior varieties taking up valuable space in local gardens — probably grown from a bit of root passed over the back fence by a kindly neighbour. These old-timers are usually a washed out blue in color or a muddy yellow shade, and have very little in common with the glowing modern varieties.

As I mentioned yesterday, this is a good time of the year to take up, divide and replant any overcrowded iris clumps in your garden. It is also a good time to give any inferior varieties the old heave-ho and study the catalogues for some of the glorious orchid-like varieties. Most iris specialists prefer to sell and ship their plants in July and early Auguat.

It occurred to me it might serve a useful purpose to list and describe a few kinds which have done well in our garden. I wouldn't be brash enough to say these are the newest of best kinds, for I can't afford the expensive super-doopers, and in any case, I don't have the room in our garden for more than just a few irises, so there are many which I have never had the opportunity of growing.

These are just a few which have done well in our particular soil and aspect:

CHINESE CORAL — A very large flower in a pinkish orange shade, flaunting a beard of billiant coral.

KARACHI — A glowing dark wine color with a splash of pure white on the falls. Huge and orchid-like, with plenty of blooms. Incidentally, I should explain that in iris language, the three petals which stand upright are called the standards, while the three that droop down are called falls.

DEBBIE RAIRDON — My wife's favorite iris, as I think it reminds her of a ball gown she once wore with considerable success. The standards are a soft yellow shade, very full and waved, while the falls are creamy white heavily banded with gold, lightly ruffled.

TAHITI SUNRISE — Pink with an undertone of salmon. Heavy red beard and very broad falls. Blooms are very large indeed, and with a texture almost like fine porcelain.

INCA CHIEF — Immense ruffled blooms, burnished golden bronze throughout.

FRONTIER MARSHAL — About the largest of all the red irises. The color is a uniform crimson throughout, with wide petals.

DENVER DAWN — Azure blue flushed with rose and mauve, heavily ruffled.

ROCOCO — Ruffled and fluted, a clean, bright blue on a white ground, winner of many prizes in Europe.

WINTER OLYMPICS — Pure white, heavily ruffled, and probably the best white iris ever bred. Winner of the Dykes Medal, a very high honor indeed, and always near the top in popularity polls.

MISSION SUNSET — A lovely apricot shade with a touch of gold and a hint of chartreuse, and a deep red beard. Lightly ruffled.

Two catalogues I can recommend are C. A. Cruickshank, 1015 Mount Pleasant Road, Toronto, Ont., M4P 2M1, and Fernciiff Bulb Gardens, Hatzic, B.C., V0M 1M0.

Arthur Hoppe

By ARTHUR HOPPE

America just had a birthday party but Liberty wasn't there. She'd gone off on a three-day weekend.

She dropped by before she left. And I must say I hadn't seen her looking better for more than a decade. Her tattered white gown was neatly patched and there was a faint blush of health on her usually pallid cheeks.

"Yes, I'm feeling much more robust these days," she said, "thanks to losing the war in Vietnam, the president over Watergate, the honor of the FBI and the sanctity of the CIA."

"But everyone agrees that all those disasters seriously weakened the government," I said.

"And a good thing, too," said Liberty with a toss of her head. "I don't know why people are always linking my name with government. Actually, we can't abide each other."

"But I thought the government was conceived in you," I said.

"Nonsense," said Liberty. "All governments are conceived in fear. You're afriad someone will bop you on the head. So, for mutual protection, you form a government with a lot of other people who are afraid of being bopped on the head. And the first thing the government does is pass a law against bopping people on the head."

"What's wrong with that?"

"The government just took away from your freedom to bop people on the head."

"That's a freedom I can do without," I said.

"Perhaps," said Liberty. "But every time the government passes another law to protect you from something you fear, it destroys another small part of me. It's getting so you can't ride a motorcycle without wearing a helmet."

"But our government exists to defend you," I said.

"Hogwash!" cried Liberty. "I am never in graver danger than when the government sets out to defend me. For it does so only when it fears for my safety."

"But that's good, isn't it?"

"In fear of the French, it passed the Alien and Sedition Acts of 1798, which would have destroyed free speech. In fear of the Japanese, it threw its own citizens into concentration camps without trial. In fear of the communists, it produced Joe McCarthy, a peacetime draft, Vietnam, Dick Nixon, wiretapping, assassination attempts, burglaries and kidnappings. For a while there, I figured that if the communists didn't get me, the government would."

"But why would the government want to do you in?" I asked.

"Fear," said Liberty. "Governments are not only conceived in fear, they thrive on fear. The stronger they grow through fear, the weaker I become. In the end, their goal is to destroy that which they fear most. Me."

"You?"

Liberty nodded. "You see, if everyone believed wholeheartedly in me, there wouldn't be any governments at all."

"Yet you've managed to live together for 200 years," I said. "How did you do it?"

"Oh, we have an ideal relationship," said Liberty as she flounded out the door. "It's based on mutual fear and distrust."

James Bacon's Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD — Bob Hope says Las Vegas will become a reality for him this year.

It's not generally known but Bob made his night club debut last New Year's Eve at the Diplomat Hotel in Hollywood, Fla., with surprise guest Jackie Gleason. He liked it.

Erlier, Hope had told Tony Zoppi of the Riviera Hotel in Las Vegas that he wanted to do a Ziegfeld-type of act complete with white tie, tails and chorus girls.

Before his phenomenal Hollywood career, Hope starred in the Ziegfeld Follies with Fanny Brice.

About six of the Strip hotels have dickered with Hope, one of the few major holdouts for that big money up there. The hotels figure that Hope, with his friends in high places, will drag big convention business to Vegas.

Bob, incidentally, was superb in his part of NBC-TV's all-day Bicentennial broadcast.

Mother of a press agent friend was babysitting with her five-year-old grandson when the kid started telling tall tales.

"Do you know what happens to little boys who tell fibs?" asked grandma.

"Yeah," said the kid. "They get rich like Daddy."

Old news, but I just heard it. What do you suppose the Moscow Circus did on its day off after closing in Chicago?

Took a plane down to Miami and caught a performance of Ringling Bros. and Barnum and Bailey.

After the performance, they visited the performers backstage and then flew off to Binghamton, N.Y., to resume their tour.

There are many truths

Stuart Rosenberg

In a pluralist world, men learn that there are many truths — not just ours — or theirs — but many. And in such a world, there are also many correct and differing ways of saying or doing the same things.

To understand this is the beginning of that communication tnan can lead to learning.

Some years ago a cartoon appeared in an American paper showing a government employee at his desk, attempting to concentrate, while at his back there stood a large black-hooded figure. The ominous one carried with him an executioner's axe on his shoulders and in the crook of his left arm a mysterious volume titled, Unknown Accusations by Unidentified Witnesses. And paradoxically, to the worker seated near his shadow, this dark-hued threatening figure is observed saying: "Don't mind me; keep right on working!"

There hangs a tale for all who seek to influence others, whether as teachers, parents, or friends. If fear is made the basis of our relationship we threaten those we seek to aid. If we continually expose a man to a threat that exceeds his ability to cope, we throw him into a tailspin, mix him up, confuse his real powers, and destroy his potential to grow. The problem is real enough. What child can learn when his father or his teacher focus their threatening attention so sharply against him that he must become witless — he's been scared out of his wits, literally.

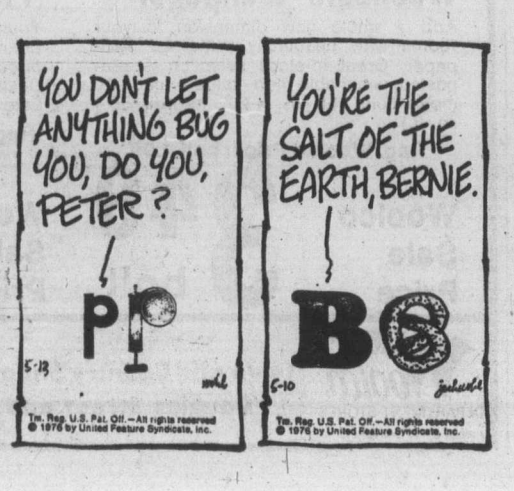

When fear is a constant, impaired receptivity is also a constant. When parents, teachers, or friends stand threateningly over a learner, mental and emotional rigor mortis will likely set in. In such a situation the endangered person will not only find it impossible to learn, but he will most likely forget even what he has already learned.

Clearly, what is meant here is not only a physical presence "standing over" the learner which immobilizes and terrozies him. When we are spiritually and psychologically overbearing, when we lord it over others because we would have them believe that only we know what is right, we are also building the barriers that make communication impossible. We quickly lose those over whom we had hoped to win.

A preacher whose sermons lacked thoughtful development and logical analysis would regularly place these notes into the margins of his prepared manuscript: "Argument weak here. Yell like Hades!" Regrettably, the louder we should and the noisier our protestations the less persuasive our message, and the weaker our influence on others.

We cannot, in the pluralist world of our day, bull our way through to others by sheer strength or by mutilating their personality simply because they are in the minority, and lack power. Only if men remove fear from each others' hearts, and stand as equals before one another, can there be true receiptivity and real human communication.

HAMBURG, West Germany — Former West German President Gustav Heinemann died Wednesday night, family sources said. Heinemann would have been 77 on July 23.

WASHINGTON — President Ford said Tuesday he will nominate Nancy Rawls, current ambassador to the Republic of Togo, to be alternate U.S. representative for "special political affairs" at the United Nations. Miss Rawls, of Brookhaven, Ga., has been in the foreign service since 1958.

VANCOUVER — Kenneth Pocha, 32, of Vancouver was charged Tuesday with four counts of robbery after three banks and a trust company were held up during the past two months. He was arrested Monday shortly after a man held up a downtown branch of Canada Permanent Trust and escaped with $600.

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — District judge Keith Hayes was disqualified Wednesday from handling Howard Hughes probate matters specifically related to a will which named Richard Hughes, a purported illegitimate son, as Howard Hughes' sole heir.

NEW YORK — Selwyn Weber of Odessa, Tex., pleaded guilty Wednesday to a charge of taking part in a $16 million fraud involving the sale and distribution of stock in Select Enterprises Inc., a virtually worthless "shell" corporation.

PARIS (UPI) — French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing dismissed rear. adm. Antoine Sanguinetti, 59, from active service Wednesday as a result of Sanguinetti's press campaign accusing Giscard of adopting pro-American defence policies. Sanguinetti was stripped of his duties as navy inspector general early this year.

Centenarian Chief Charlie Jones shows he's still got style

Indian chief marks 100th

Longevity comes to a hunter naturally if he can survive the wrath of the sea, says Chief Charlie Jones of Port Renfew.

The chief, who celebrated his 100th birthday, Wednesday, is believed to be the last of the open-sea seal hunters.

He was trained as a boy to harpoon seals from the bow of a canoe and took part in seal hunting expeditions in the Bering Sea.

"A hunter develops strong chest, arm and leg muscles," he said. "He lives long if the sea doesn't claim him—if he remains true to his guardian spirit."

When logging was introduced in the Port Renfrew area on southern Vancouver Island, the logging camp at Bear Creek, about 15 miles up the San Juan River, depended on the chief for its provisions. He used to pole a canoe laden with supplies up the river.

Wolfe seeking changes in cost-sharing formula

Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said Wednesday he wants to see a broadening of the existing revenue equalization formula.

Wolfe said he would like to see the federal government adopt a position where there would be a simple program across Canada for shared cost programs involving health care, hospitals and post-secondary education.

The minister said on his return from the finance ministers' conference in Ottawa that differences in provinces' abilities to pay for these programs can be taken care of through equalization, but that it should be broadened.

Wolfe said a study of that proposal will be undertaken by federal and provincial finance officials.

Quake kills 274

GENEVA (Reuter) — The League of Red Cross Societies said Tuesday that 274 persons were killed and 30 were reported missing after an earthquake June 26 in the Irian island of Indonesian New Guinea. League headquarters said 30,000 people were affected by the quake.

UVic law students start free legal information clinic

Twelve students from the University of Victoria's new law school have established a free legal information clinic in James Bay.

Called the Student Legal Assistance Program, the clinic was organized by the student volunteers with adviee and help from members of the law faculty.

The clinic offers free legal information and assistance. It is staffed by the students with the aid of members of the Victoria Bar, and is a student responsibility.

Student volunteers at the clinic attempt to explain legal alternatives open to a client, and in that way encourage people to learn about and solve their own legal problems.

Assistance includes unemployment insurance and welfare information, small claims procedure, consumer matters, landlord-tenant relations, family law, and debt counselling.

The clinic also operates a referral service to agencies such as Legal Aid and to the private bar through the Lawyer Referral Service.

Problems such as criminal matters, personal injuries, land transactions, and probate and administrative matters of more than $5,000 are immediately referred.

The clinic is in the offices of the James Bay Community Centre in James Bay Square. It is open every Saturday from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m. and appointments are not necessary.

Joint summer program opens

Juan de Fuca Parks and Recreation Commission, in conjuction with the Langford Boys and Girls Club, is conducting a summer playground program until Aug. 27.

Planned for children three to 13 years of age, the program runs from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Mondays to Fridays and includes games, crafts, sports, field trips and sport days. Fee is 50 cents.

The program is being conducted on the grounds of Dunsmuir, Langford and Happy Valley schools.

Film date alters

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Film Institute has extended the deadline to July 15 for entries in competitions here in August as part of an international animated film festival.

The festival, sanctioned by the International Animated Film Association and the International Federation of Film Producers, is the first in North America. To be held at the National Arts Cente Aug. 10-15, it is similar to earlier festivals in Annecy France, and Zagreb, Yugoslavia.

Entries from 13 countries have already been filed, but last month's interruption of air services in Canada prompted the institute to extend the deadline by two weeks.

More than 100 participants, mostly teachers, students and professional film-makers, have also registered for workshop sessions at the University of Ottawa Aug. 9-14.

Norman McLaren, internationally-recognized National Film Board animator, will be chairman of the festival, and a retrospective of his work will be shown.

In the competition, awards will be made for animation in commercials and public service announcements, which the institute said are some of the most creative but least recognized aspects of the film animation industry.

Other competitions include films running less than three minutes, films for children, films for education, first films, student films, and films running longer than three minutes.

Entries so far have been received from Australia, Belgium, Canada, France, Holland, Iran, Japan, Norway, Switzerland, the United Kingdom, the United States, Venezuela, and Yugoslavia.

Dog's death costly

NANAIMO — Two men from Gabriola Island have been fined $150 each after being found guilty of unlawfully shooting a dog.

The two were charged after the animal's owner, Olav Sleeph of Gabriola Island, complained to RCMP that his dog Thorn, a German shepherd which was the son of the famous television dog hero The Littlest Hobo, had been shot for no apparent reason.

The two men Gary Hague, 21, and Sid Skinner, 30, told the court that the dog had been running sheep on the island and when spotted by the two, it was in among a group of grazing sheep.

However, provincial court judge Jack Caldwell said in handing down his verdict Tuesday, that there was no evidence to support the men's claim.

In the Nov. 7 incident, the court was told, the dog was shot and its body discarded in nearby bush.

In another case, a young Nanaimo man, John James MacDonald, 18, of 885 Malaspina Crescent, has been committed for county court trial on a charge of assault causing bodily harm.

The charge was laid from an incident which arose during a commercial Hockey League game in Nanaimo March 26.

Three held in theft of relics

COLOGNE, West Germany (AP) — Three Yugoslavs have admitted stealing treasures from Cologne cathedral last year with the help of mountain climbing gear.

Police and officials of the Cologne state attorney's office said 40 per cent of the cathedral's gem-encrusted relics have been recovered.

The relics, stolen Nov. 2, are insured for $800,000 but are considered priceless.

Spokesmen said Branislaw Tunjic, 23, and Viliam Dalavale, 27, were arrested in Zurich, Switzerland, June 17. Ljubomir Ernst, 43, was apprehended in Milan last Saturday and his wife Johanna, 36, is under investigative detention in Belgrade, authorities said.

Curbs on U.S. federal courts

Conviction overturning blocked

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Declaring the guilty too often are freed for technical violations of their rights by police, the U.S. supreme court has barred federal courts from overturning state convictions based on illegally seized evidence.

The historic 6-3 decision — in which the majority struck down major protections for the rights of the accused secured under Chief Justice Earl Warren — came on the court's last day of the term.

Aside from ruling on five cases involving police search and seizure, the court also followed up on last Friday's capital punishment decisions by striking down Oklahoma's death penalty law.

The justices let stand death sentences for nine Georgia and five Florida death row inmates who had sought supreme court review, and vacated the death sentences of 40 persons on North Carolina's death row and three in Louisiana.

The Georgia and Florida laws were upheld Friday. Those of North Carolina and Louisiana were struck down.

The justices also agreed to rule further next term on abortion rights. They will hear arguments involving Missouri, Pennsylvania and Connecticut regarding when poor women can obtain abortions at state expense.

New rules for federal review of state convictions involved appeals from California and Nebraska.

The court also ruled in three other fourth amendment cases, in each instance upholding by divided vote the police search power. It:

- Upheld the power of the U.S. border patrol to stop vehicles randomly at fixed checkpoints near the Mexican border in search for illegal aliens.
- Ruled police do not need a warrant to search a car impounded for traffic violations, and evidence of a crime found in the search can be used at trial.
- Held that evidence illegally seized by local police and not used at a criminal trial can be used by the U.S. Internal Revenue Service in a civil suit to collect back taxes for illegal gambling proceeds.

CTV criticized on programs

OTTAWA (CP) — The CTV television network was granted a three-year renewal of its licence this week but the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission urged it to increase its Canadian programming.

The commission noted that there is no weekly Canadian drama show in the privately owned network's 1976-77 schedule, and that 90 per cent of its programs in the 8 p.m.-10 p.m. viewing period are brought from U.S. sources.

The CTV Network has done well in expanding its Canadian news covereage, the commission said, but it still is not buying sufficient programs from independent Canadian producers.

In renewing the licence until Sept. 30, 1979, the CRTC said "a complete public review of the performance of the network" should be made within the three-year period. The commission will also continue to hold formal meetings each year with CTV management to discuss the network's affairs.

CTV appeared before the commission last November seeking renewal of its licence from Sept. 30 this year. The commission's decision, signed by Secretary-General Guy Lefebvre, both praised the network and urged improvements.

When the licence was last up for renewal in 1972, the then Canadian Radio-Televison Commission urged the network to develop drama with Canadian themes, concerns and locales.

CTV subsequently produced Excuse My French, a weekly situation comedy show from Montreal. The program in two seasons rose to be CTV's third most popular, but it ended this spring when its star—Stuart Gillard—went to Hollywood to be a writer for the new Sonny and Cher show.

BECOME AN OVERPROTECTIVE PARENT.

If there's one time your children should be protected from life's hard knocks, it's when you're traveling along the highway at 60 m.p.h.

Which is why more and more thinking parents choose to travel in the security of a Volvo wagon.

Volvo has crumple zones which collapse at a predetermined rate to help absorb the impact of a collision. The passengers are surrounded by a strong, protective cage formed by box steel pillars.

Even the U.S. government is impressed by Volvo's safety characteristics. In fact, they're buying 24 Volvos for a crash-testing program which will help establish safety standards for cars of the future.

Volvo also has other things to add to your sense of security.

Rack and pinion steering to help you steer clear of trouble. Power disc brakes on all four wheels, instead of just two. A quick, responsive fuel-injected overhead cam engine. 3-point seat belts front and rear. And childproof rear door locks to keep the kids in their place.

So come in and look at our Volvo wagons.

You'll not only be getting a big wagon to carry your worldly possessions.

You'll be getting a safer wagon to carry your most valuable possessions of all.

THERE ARE A LOT OF CARS IN VOLVO'S PRICE CLASS. BUT NOT IN VOLVO'S CLASS.

aboutv

bruce lowther

The following item is true. I swear it on my stack of copies of Variety, which reported it.

Dan Ahlstrom, deputy city attorney in Las Vegas, said the city attorney's office is considering a ratings system for motel rooms where movies are shown by pay-TV. Variety quotes Ahlstrom as explaining:

"Everybody could occupy a G room. A PG room would indicate parental guidance. An R room would require anyone under 17 to be accompanied by a parent." There was no quote about an X room.

Pay-TV is coming and, therefore, so is the day when swinging 70-year-olds ask the desk clerk at The Empress for an X room. There'll be one benefit: the name of Smith will go back to being that of a coughdrop.

Bureau of Useless Information: Wednesday's answer—The last of a batch of U.S. political wives numbered Rosalynn Carter, Nancy Kissinger, Abigail McCarthy, Eleanor McGovern and Eunice Shriver. Her mother and therefore mother-in-law of Sargent Shriver is Rose Kennedy.

Today's question—If the ship in Gardner McKay's old TV series Adventures in Paradise was the Tiki, which it was, name the vessels in each of the long-running series Gilligan's Island and Voyage to the Bottom of the Sea. The last was not the Nautilus. Answers Friday.

"I'll be back shortly with a roundup of what happened in the world while you were watching the following commercials."

Thursday highlights

NEW STUFF: The CBC starts a summer series of music-variety hour reruns under the name of Showcase at 1 p.m. on Channel 2 while Fishing Report makes its debut at 6:15 p.m. on Channel 12.

8:00 p.m.—CBC Performance's rerun stars Horst Buchholz as a doctor in licence trouble in Welcome Stranger—2, 6.

8:00—Life around an African baobab tree is another rerun—5.

• 8:00—Upstairs, Downstairs starts a repeat of its 13 Great War episodes. Don't say I didn't tell you—9.

CABLE 10—7 p.m., Sharon McBain's Community Action with rentalsman Barrie Clark; 8:00, To Be Announced for the rest of the evening. Sorry, but community program makers take holidays if Cable 10 doesn't.

Thursday movies

• 12:45 noon—Judgment at Nuremberg (often great 1961 war-crimes trial), Tracy, Widmark, Schell, Garland, Clift, many more. Part one now, the conclusion in 24 hours and see both once—8.

• 1:00 p.m.—Miracle of Morgan's Creek (hilarious 1944 Preston Sturges war-shaft), Betty Hutton, Eddie Bracken, Diana Kockenlocker. I can't recall recommending the first two movies of a weekday before—11.

3:30—The First Texan (1956 Joel McCrea). Back to normal—5.

9:00—Goodbye Again (just dull 1961 Ingrid Bergman love stuff). With Yves Montand and Tony Perkins; goodbye forever—5.

• 9:00—Through a Glass Darkly (1960, one of Ingmar Bergman's best), Harriet Anderson, Gunnar Bjornstrand, Max Von Sydow. The first of four Bergmans on Thursdays this month—9.

9:00—The Bounty Killer (1964 Rod Cameron westernothing). What a crazy world it is: at the same time, three channels are showing Ingmar Bergman, Ingrid Bergman and this hamburger—11.

9:30—Where Were You When the Lights Went Out? (supercoy 1968 Doris Day comedy). With Robert Morse, who leaves me code—12.

11:30—Willard (popular, all right 1971 horror), Bruce Davison, Ernest Borgnine. With all the movies about killer rats, sharks and grizzlies, don't get too close to your canary—12.

12:00—They All Kissed the Bride (missable 1942 romanticomedy), Melvyn Douglas, Joan Crawford. Remade today, it would have an all-woman cast—2.

12:00—The Day the Hot Line Got Hot (silly 1969 spyslop), Charles Boyer, Robert Taylor. Anything is better—6.

12:00—79 A.D. (sillier 1961 Brad Harris, gladiator). Sorry; this is no better—8.

12:30 a.m.—Modesty Blaise (harmless 1966 spy spoof), Monica Vitti, Terence Stamp and the keen villain who steals the show, Dirk Bogarde—7.

1:55—Operation Mad Ball (sometimes funny 1957 services comedy), Ernie Kovacs, Jack Lemmon and a great bit by Mickey Rooney—6.

2:30—Fire Over Africa (foolish 1954 drugs fizzle), Maureen O'Hara, Macdonald Carey. A far cry from Nuremberg and Morgan's Creek—8.

2:45—Wonder Man (okay 1945 Danny Kaye). Matilda says this isn't about a TV columnist, which makes me wonder, man—7.

Thursday radio

8:00 p.m.—Exhibition football, Edmonton at B.C.—C-FAX (1070).

8:00—Second run of a short CBC series on U.S. composer Charles Ives. He was a stockbroker, too, which I suppose made him a dealer in stocks and bands—CBU (690).

99 GROCERIES, MEAT and PRODUCE

They say
Strawberry picking Died.
I thought on this
And nearly cried.
I saw these things
This very year—
English visitor affirming North and South the same in any country. Grandfather killing snake with his cane. Young mother nursing her baby in the shade. Sea Captain sun sick. 10-year-old girl strawberry sick. Lady dressed in party dress. Man dressed like a scarecrow. Milk white skin lady getting sunburn. Mother-to-be jumped in VW — destination nearest Hospital, result — 9 lb. 3 ozs. Blind lady picking ripe berries by feeling — then sifting listening to the skylark sing. Man with hard to manage family. Aggravated wife scolding her husband. Frantic wife looking for car keys. Prairie girl insisting sun set in East on Vancouver Island. Young man making sheeps eyes at pretty girl. Young lady running downhill from a snake. But all picking Honey Sweet Strawberries where we put the little berry on top. 6373 Oldfield Road.

3 NEW HOMES
Why not take a drive out to see Sea Place this evening. It's off Wallace Drive at Saanichton. One 1380 sq. ft. luxury home, triple carport, aluminum siding, ready to move in at $73,500. Two more planned for completion in July. One is a split level with most interesting roof line, at $75,000. The other a 1344 sq. ft. New England Colonial beauty at $76,000. All electric. All on sewer. Among many reasons for buying out here are more house for your dollar, larger lots, views of sea and country, no thru-traffic, peace and quiet of the country and yet quick and easy access to the city, airport and ferry, and your investment will appreciate in value rapidly. The only thing that really dictates whether a property is offered at a realistic price is the owner's motive for sale! The owners here have the best possible motive . . . they have bought another, smaller home so DON'T MISS AN EXCELLENT OPPORTUNITY to see a spotless, well planned, spacious home with every modern feature you need along with middle-aged charm and quality. You even get a glimpse of the Gorge. In a market full of overpriced listings, it is a pleasure to offer this lovely home at a sensible price. MLS. For more details, please call

Oft and again, a leaf blown
by the wind
Falls on the broad ocean

'Tis never lost; where'er it fate may blow,

The imprint of its settling's left behind.

And so with every life,
whate'er its kind,

It shapes itself a place,
'tis destined so,

If hence in peace or turmoil
it should go,

Its influence ever lives,
as 'twas designed.

308-A CARDS OF THANKS

I wish to express my sincere thanks and appreciation to our friends and relatives for their kindness to myself and family on the loss of a dear husband and father. A very special thanks to Dr. R. J. Campbell, Dr. R. T. Brownlee and to the staff on "Third Royal" who were all so very kind to Mr. Bentham. To Cannon Eagles for his comforting words, also to Mason Sands for being so helpful to us at this time. — Maud Bentham and family.

309 IN MEMORIAMS

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD, AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD. AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN. AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS.

Friendly voice missing

Operators being replaced

Starting today more than 40,000 Victoria Evergreen phone subscribers will miss operators asking for their number when they make direct-distance dialed calls.

Automatic number identification equipment will automatically record customer's numbers when they dial 112 and direct-distance dial their own calls as a result of installation of a new $5 million electronic exchnage in B.C. Telephone Co.'s new downtown building.

The electronic computerized installation will provide all "38" exchange subscribers with electronic long distance service.

"This means that electronic equipment instantly identifies the originating number when the customer places a direct distance dialed long distance call," Bert Parker, Victoria district consumer service manager, explained.

However, subscribers in the "388" exchange currently receiving the automatic number identification service will lose this feature from now to Aug. 7 when equipment rearrangements now underway will be completed.

Starting Aug. 7, all "388" Evergreen subscribers will receive both local and direct distance dialing services with the new electronic machine.

"Today all '38' customers, whether using conventional dial or touch-calling phones, will notice a silence on their line after having placed their calls while the electronic equipment is processing them," Parker said. The silence does not indicate the call has gone astray.

By 1980 about 51 per centof phones in-service in the B.C. Telephone system will be under electronic common control, and by 1985 the target is 75 per cent.

Telegraph operators 'low risk'

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — If B.C. Workers' Compensation Board premium rates are any measure, the least hazardous job in the province belongs to telegraph operators.

Based on a WCB rate chart, telegraphers are lowest risk employees covered with a levy of 21 cents per $100 payroll.

Air transportation industry workers (excluding ground crews) are highest with pilots at the top with a levy of $15.17 per $100 payroll.

Close behind the telegraphers are architects and consulting engineers at 25 cents, film projectionists at 27 cents, trade union employees at 30 cents and retail store employees at 47 cents, while loggers are at $8.66.

Hydro employees start selective strike action

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Office and Technical Employees Union has started selective strike action against British Columbia Hydro and said Wednesday it plans to escalate the strikes until it resolves its dispute with the government corporation.

The 53 key-punch operators who were off the job Tuesday were joined Wednesday by 33 meter readers. A corporation spokesman said there was no appreciable effect on operations. Hydro employs 3,300 persons.

Fred Trotter, president of local 378 of the union, said although the union will step up strike activity, it will not do so in areas that might affect public safety.

He also said that union members have been asked to give 10 per cent of their wages to help finance the strike. He would not say how much this would raise but the payments would be voluntary.

Those who don't make the contributions will be asked to go on strike. If neither option is exercised, the member will be disciplined by the union.

"There is nothing new or unique about this," said Trotter. "The membership approved of this action at a recent meeting." Hydro's office workers have been without a contract since May 31, 1975.

Two months ago members voted 88 per cent in favor of strike action to back up their demands for a new contract. The union has banned all overtime since June 24.

Provincial mediator Charles Stewart failed in an attempt to reach a settlement of the contract dispute.

The union has been seeking a total wage increase of 19.7 per cent over 22 months.

The crown corporation has offered a wage boost of 6½ per cent to a maximum of $73 a month.

Soviets reduce radiation level

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The Soviet Union has sharply reduced the level of microwave radiation at the U.S. embassy in Moscow, the U.S. state department said Wednesday.

But department spokesman Robert Funseth voiced regret the Soviets have not eliminated entirely the radiation, believed to come from Soviet electronic jamming or eavesdropping devices.

Religion no reason for not paying dues

VANCOUVER (CP) — Employees exempted from union membership on religious grounds must contribute the equivalent of union dues to their union, Justice E. E. Hinkson ruled Wednesday.

The B.C. Supreme Court judge dismissed an action by three B.C. government employees, in which they claimed that a section of the Public Service Labor Relations Act requiring the contributions was beyond the powers of the provincial government.

The employees, A. John Price, Arnold N. Fraser, and B. Eileen McRae, sued the attorney-general, the minister of labor, the provincial Labor Relations Board and the queen in the right of the province for a declaration that a portion of Section 8 of the Public Service Labor Relations Act was ultra vires.

Each of the employees had refused to join the B.C. Government Employees' Union on the basis of religious beliefs, and in 1974 each was exempted from membership by order of the Labor Relations Board.

At the same time, the board ordered them to make a written assignment of wages to the union and they refused to do so.

Hinkson said that Section 8 of the act does not deal with the profession and dissemination of religious faith and the exercise of religious worship.

The B.C. Supreme Court also rejected an application by the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union Local 604 to find Seagram's strike-bound B.C. distillery in contempt of the labor board.

Justice S. Martin Toy ruled Tuesday no breach of a labor board order had been committed by the company.

The union had sought a writ that the company was in contempt of the order, issued April 28 last year.

The board order called on the company to end an illegal lockout of union members in the bottling section of the distillery.

The judge found the company had not breached the order because the union had previously authorized the strike.

B.C. aids transit services

Transit assistance is being extended to six B.C. municipalities, Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis announced Wednesday.

He said Trail, Kamloops, Prince Rupert, Maple Ridge, Kelowna and Penticton will receive more than $2.3 million in provincial funds for improved transit services.

The money will be split three ways — $1.7 million in buses and other investments, $500,000 in annual subsidies to cover half of anticipated operating deficits, and $125,000 in start-up costs.

The minister said the start-up dates for the transit services in the six centres depended on such things as completion of staff recruitment, municipal council approval of plans, negotiations with local transit operators, and the availability of buses.

Cancer study gets $3,700

A total of $3,700 has been presented to the Canadian Cancer Society by the United Commercial Travellers Council, Local 434.

The council has been making donations to cancer research for years, and a Western Canada Lottery agency granted to the council in 1974 has added to those donations.

Since 1974, $9,300 has gone to the society as a direct result of ticket sales.

In the most recent donation, $1,700 was raised through ticket sales and $2,000 was a "bonus" from reserve monies in the UCT's Western Fund, the result of excellent sales during the past year.

Arrests follow two explosions

CAIRO (Reuter) — Cairo newspapers reported that an undisclosed number of Libyans were arrested after explosions at the Egyptian border town of Mersa Metruh. There were no injuries reported and damage was described as slight.

New Zealand bans cargoes

WELLINGTON (Reuter) — New Zealand trade unionists will refuse to handle South African cargoes shipped to or from New Zealand for a five-week period starting Monday. The Federation of Labor described the ban as a protest against "the murderous attacks on women and children at Soweto" and the apartheid policies of the South African government.

Cairo calls truce talks

CAIRO (UPI) — Arab League secretary-general Mahmoud Riad summoned Arab foreign ministers Wednesday to another emergency conference next Monday to find a way to press the flagging Pan-Arab peace effort in Lebanon.

Riad, who was in Damascus, called the meeting in Cairo in his capacity as leader of a three-man peace mission to establish and supervise a truce in the 15-month-old Lebanese civil war.

In a diplomatic understatement, Riad said the new meeting will "hear a progress report" on the work of the mission, which has been shuttling between Lebanon and Syria inquest of a cease-fire.

The mission's effort has been aborted by an escalation in fighting — notably by the siege agaist Beirut's Tal Zaatar Palestinian refugee camp, now in its third week — pitting Palestinian and Lebanese leftist factions against Christian right-wing militias supported by Syrian invasion troops. More than 300 soldiers and civilians died in Wednesday's fighting — the highest toll yet.

—AP

A cease-fire arranged by the mission never took hold last weekend. On Sunday, the group managed to bring opposing factions together for a preliminary peace meeting at the Lebanese mountain resort of Sofar, east of Beirut. Further meetings, however, were scrapped because of continued fighting.

Between now and Monday, Riad said, he and his political adviser Hassan Sabry El-Kholy of Egypt will try to organize another round of peace talks.

But in the absence of a cease-fire, Arab diplomats said there was little hope of such a meeting taking place. The ministerial session next Monday will have to decide what to do next to stop the bloodshed, they said.

Other members of the mission are foreign ministers Habib Chatti of Tunisia and Mohamed Ben Mubarak of Bahrain.

The Arab nations called for an immediate cease-fire at their first foreign minister's conference June 8-9, and decided to send a joint peace-keeping force to police it.

But there was no cease-fire and, three weeks later, only 1,000 peace-keeping troops from Libya and Syria had arrived in Lebanon out of an estimated force of 6,000.

The miisters met agai June 30-July 1 and decided to send the Riad mission to establish and supervise a cease-fire. Since then, 1,300 more soldiers from Saudi Arabia and the Sudan have gone to Lebanon.

Israel bringing 'proof' to UN

Amin 'aided' hijackers

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Israel said Wednesday it will prove before the UN Security Council the "complicity" of Ugandan leader Idi Amin in the Entebbe airport hijack.

Government officials said Israel acted out of the "exalted principle of man's freedom" in ordering the commando rescue of more than 100 hostages — most of them Israelis — from pro-Palestinian hijackers at Kampala's Entebbe airport.

The officials said Israel would take part in any security council debate on the rescue operation and said Israel was certain the United States would veto any resolution condemning the action.

The Organization of African Unity called Tuesday for a council meeting on the "wanton act of aggression" by Israel against Uganda. Twenty Ugandan soldiers, seven hijackers, three hostages and one Israeli soldier were reported slain in the raid.

(At the United Nations, the security council scheduled a meeting on the Israeli operation for today.)

An Israel offjcial said the evidence would include testimony from the freed hostages, who have accused Amin of letting the hijackers bring in reinforcements, weapons and explosives.

Responding in New York to the Air France hijacking, of former UN ambassador Daniel Moynihan Wednesday urged the United States to take a leading role in the drive against international terrorism.

Moynihan, one of five Democrats seeking the U.S. Senate seat held by James Buckley, said the hijacking and subsequent rescue "marked the onset of new and altogether ominous developments."

He said the hijacking was carried out by at least two separate terrorist elements with the "active collusion of the Ugandan government."

"The rudiments of an international terrorist alliance are in the making and a general base in Yemen seems already established," Moynihan said. Co-operative effort among the world's nations.

He said the Entebbe incident has begun an international debate on measures to combat terrorism. "The United States should take a leading role in that debate, especially at the United Nations and should insist on a positive outcome."

He suggested a possible solution would be a boycott on airports in countries which cooperated with hijackers. He declined to specify other alternatives.

In a move timed to dramatic support for Kenya amid new tensions following the Entebbe raid, the Pentagon Wednesday asked Congress to approve the sale of 12 F-5 jet fighter bombers to the Nairobi regime.

The $70.6 million deal has been in the works for months but it has taken on a new urgency because of Uganda's threats to retaliate for what Amin's government calls Kenya collaboration with the Israeli attack.

Congress has 20 days, after it returns July 19 from its recess for the Democratic National Convention, to approve or reject the sale.

Ugandans continued to watch Wednesday for enemy planes that never seemed to come and Amin placed his armed forces on alert.

Hours after Ugandan radio reported that 30 enemy aircraft were approaching from neighboring Kenya, a military spokesman said the planes were detected by radar. He urged the public not to panic and to keep a close eye on any suspected western spies.

The spokesman said that if any Ugandan spotted an enemy aircraft landing he should use any weapon within reach to finish off its occupants because the "enemy has no sympathy."

Strike could mar coverage

MONTREAL (CP) — Union leaders for 350 technicians employed by Teleglobe Canada held out little hope Wednesday for avoiding a strike which would disrupt overseas television transmissions of the Olympic Games.

Peter Cooper, co-president of the Canadian Overseas Telecommunications Union, said the union executive has decided to begin the strike before the opening of the Olympic Games on July 17, but refused to divulge the exact date.

"It would appear to be a matter of just waiting for a strike," he said.

Union officials have said Teleglobe would not be able to maintain its transmission of Olympic television coverage for foreign networks in the event of a strike.

European television networks were reported to be studying possible contingency plans in the event of an interruption of service.

But an official of the British Broadcasting Corp. said his organization, as well as other European broadcasting groups, "are still up to our necks setting up here and we aren't giving it a thought for now."

Brian Townsley, spokesman for Teleglobe, said the Crown corporation would attempt to maintain service in the event of a walkout.

"We would certainly make every attempt to fulfill our obligations," he told a reporter.

"It is hard to say what degree of service would be affected, I don't think anybody knows," he added.

The technicians have already voted 98.5 per cent in favor of strike action.

Rehabilitation role declining

ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI) — The director of U.S. prisons Wednesday said punishing wrongdoers, protecting society and deterring others from crime are gaining recognition as goals of the corrections system.

The idea that rehabilitation is the sole purpose of prison is being discarded as "unrealistic," according to director Norman A. Carlson of the U.S. Bureau of Prisons.

"The new sense of realism has led to a more balanced philosophy of corrections — one that recognizes that retribution, deterrence, incapacitation and rehabilitation are all objectives of incarceration," Carlson said.

"To assume that the system can somehow rehabilitate all such individuals as simply unrealistic," he said in a speech prepared for a criminal justice institute of the Florida council on crime and delinquency.

"Most of us in the field of criminal justice are now willing to admit that we don't know how to change offenders when they have no desire to change themselves," said Carlson.

"The aggressive and assaultive individual must be incapacitated to protect society. A person convicted of income tax evasion is sentenced primarily as a warning to others. Organized crime figures are locked up so they cannot prey on the public . . ."

However, Carlson said, the right of prison inmates to humane treatment and living conditions is gaining recognition in courts and in professional circles, and prisons at the same time are becoming crowded as a result of the rising crime rate.

"In the long run, new jails and prisons will have to be built," he said.

"Half the maximum security institutions in this country were built during the 19th century and there is no hope that they can be modernized to meet standards established by the courts and other organizations."

Orbiting cosmonauts

Everything's fine aboard Salyut-5

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Two Soviet cosmonauts docked their Soyuz-21 ferry vehicle Wednesday with the unmanned orbital station Salyut-5 and both transferred to it, Tass news agency reported.

Soviet television said the two men boarded Salyut, which was launched on June 22.

The regular television evening news program was interrupted for the special bulletin from ground control at Yevpatoria in the Crimea.

The cosmonauts, Cal. Boris Volynov and Liet. Colonel Vitaly Zholobov, docked with the station nearly five hours before boarding it, the reported siad.

"The most difficult phase of their work has been completed," he said.

Another cosmonaut, Alexei Yeliseyev, told the television reporter that the two had carried out a visual check of Salyut and reported that everything on board was working normally.

Viking delayed again as search goes on

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — Viking scientists Wednesday postponed for the second time the landing of Viking 1 on Mars because the alternate site was discovered to be rougher than expected.

A spokesman said scientists are now looking at a more westerly area of the Chryse Planitia, where they said the terrain was smoother. But a landing cannot be made any earlier than July 20. They had planned a July 17 landing.

The second site, in the northwest territory of the original A-1 landing area, was rejected after scientists studied radar data that indicated it was more rugged than the original site.

"New radar results obtained July 3 and 4 at the Arecibo Observatory in Puerto Rico indicate that a more westerly area of Chryse Planitia may be smoother than the previously selected northwest site," a jet propulsion laboratory spokesman said.

The new site has not been photographed by Viking 1, but radar data has been obtained.

Construction

'Bad break' slows pact talks

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Reporter

An air of gloom settled over the embattled construction scene Wednesday leaving negotiators with little hope of early settlement to the province-wide lockout-strike situation.

"We had a bad break today. The metal trades group threw a curve at us and it's questionable whether they'll be back," said George Wheaton, Construction Labor Relations Association chairman.

Wheaton, who heads a Victoria construction firm, has been taking part in continuing talks between CLRA and the unions in Vancouver.

"There's less than progress at this stage," he said.

The breakup with the eight metal trade unions came during a stalemate on individual union problems. Wheaton said discussion of monetary items "is still a long way off."

The unions have remained split in two camps with the metal trades in one and the basic trades in the other. The basic trades are headed by the carpenters, biggest of the 22 unions involved in the dispute.

A spokesman for the B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council said he understood little had been achieved during the talks so far. However, because of the lack of joint bargaining, the council is all but out of the picture. It serves as an umbrella organization for the construction unions.

Wheaton said certain individual demands of the cement masons, iron workers and electricians carried the threat of renewed strike action if they weren't resolved in any over-all settlement.

The cement masons and carpenters took strike action before CLRA imposed an industry-wide lockout eight days ago. It is the fourth consecutive bargaining year shutdown since 1970 and it has brought work to a halt on the major share of an estimated $3 billion in building projects.

It was also to have idled 40,000 tradesmen, but union spokesmen say varying numbers are still employed on small jobs being carried out by union contractors who do not belong to CLRA.

On Vancouver Island alone, only 1,400 of 5,500 tradesmen are reported to have been affected so far by the shutdown.

Some 850 contracting firms are represented by CLRA.

Wheaton said the cement masons are only willing to forego their demand for a catch-up wage increase if it is withheld from other unions with the same demand.

He said cement masons business agent Frank Stevens told CLRA negotiators his union is prepared to "stay out until Christmas" unless its demand is met.

Past shutdowns have lasted as long as three months.

There has been no movement toward new discussion of wage rates since CLRA's offer of an across-the-board eight per cent package increase was rejected June 2.

Wheaton repeated his charge that some of the union leaders are more interested in inter-union politics and rivalry than in the welfare of their members.

"The time has come for them to stop playing games with the welfare of the industry, their memberships and the economy of the country," he said.

Because a paralysis of construction is viewed by the government as a serious threat to the economy, Labor Minister Allan Williams has been keeping a close watch on developments. But to date he has made no effort to intervene.

While Wheaton heaps the blame on the unions, CLRA has been accused by a number of union leaders of creating the fragmented union bargaining structure that exists. They say that in the past CLRA has brought unions "in the back door" to deal with them separately.

Wheaton said CLRA's invitation to deal with individual union problems in the current talks has produced issues that weren't presented in the earlier talks.

"One union has confronted us with 12 or 13 pages of proposals we hadn't seen before," he said.

While he doesn't expect many of the metal trade unions to return to the bargaining table today, talks are scheduled with a number of other unions.

Queen delivers Rose Garden speech to U.S.

Colonist Wire Services

WASHINGTON — Queen Elizabeth raised her glass to the United States Wednesday night at a White House banquet as she told an audience of 200 that "today, no nation can stand alone."

"We depend as never before upon each other."

In an air-conditioned tent in the White House Rose Garden, the queen quoted her ancestor, King George III, in the words he pronounced to John Adams in 1785:

"I was the last man in the kingdom to consent to the separation. But the separation having been made, I have always said, as I say now, that I would be the first to meet the friendship of the United States as an independent power."

John Adams, who went on to become president of the U.S., was the first envoy to England from his new country.

"Both our peoples believe in the world of the individual and the family, in the freedom of religion and expression, and in the right to change a government by the ballot box rather than the gun, perhaps the best definition of democracy," the queen said.

"That is why, time and time again, in the testing days of war and the constructive years of peace, we have

Canadians support IOC

MONTREAL (UPI) — The Canadian Olympic Association sided with the International Olympic Committee Wednesday night and protested the federal government's stand on Taiwan's participation at the 1976 Summer Olympics as "a serious and unacceptable breach of faith."

In a formal statement, COA president Harold M. Wright said "the COA fully supports and endorses the position taken by the IOC in the matter.

"Political interference in the Olympic games, particularly where access of athletes to the country in which the games are being held is denied or interferred with, is unacceptable and contrary to the assurances required and obtained by the IOC when the games are awarded.

The COA is as concerned as the IOC with the ramifications of the attitude of the Canadian government in its possible extension to future olympic games."

Wright said when the COA approved Montreal's bid for the Games in 1969 it was on assurances from the Canadian government that it would allow entry to all athletes recognized by the IOC.

Wright stressed that "in the context of the Olympic Games, the question of principle involved was far more important than the particular facts of the two China policy which has given rise to the controversy."

Canada's decision to recognize the People's Republic of China in 1970 did not alter Ottawa's "firm undertaking" in 1969 when Montreal prepared its application, he said.

'Mocking' U.K. press criticized by Indians

EDMONTON (CP) — Six Alberta Indian chiefs returned Wednesday afternoon less than happy with their nine-day visit to the United Kingdom.

At a legislative building reception, some of the chiefs aired their views on the trip.

Both Chiefs, John Snow and and Joe Dion said they expected the British press to have an unclear view of Indians but said that what they experienced was "mocking coverage."

Some British newspapers made references to "Injuns" and cartoons showed them dancing around a dinner table with tomahawks in their hands.

"I didn't expect a real good report from the press," said Snow. "But the queen was really quite receptive to us" and had extended the time allotted for their meeting.

"Our mission was to remind the queen that we have treaties with her. We are here to stay but our treaties have not been observed."

Snow was particularly impressed with the reception in Scotland.

"We have something in common with the people of Scotland," said Snow. "We both don't have a say in the decision-making process with our governments."

Dion said English people "seemed disappointed that we didn't act like they thought an Indian should."

"They have a stereotyped idea of Indians. They figured we should be like the cowboys and Indian movies they see," he said.

"Our reception with the queen went well but I sensed an uneasiness on her part. She didn't know quite what to expect, and we didn't get a chance to give a good statement on the treaties.

"She said the question of the treaties was very serious and then changed the subject."

'Think again on fares'

NANAIMO — The Social Credit candidate for Nanaimo in the last provincial election has called on Transport Minister Jack Davis to take another look at the increased ferry rates.

Graeme Roberts, who finished behind David Stupich (NDP) in the Dec. 11, 1975 voting, said Wednesday that governments are capable of making mistakes but, he added, "governments sensitive to the will of the people are equally capable of correcting their mistakes," and, he added, "do it."

He said in his letter to the minister that he was speaking for thousands of working people in calling for a rollback in rates.

"Pocket your pride," Roberts said. "Adjust your decision to where the 'fare is fair' and not beyond the means of the people you serve."

Roberts said one didn't need to be a Rhodes scholar to understand which was better for the economy — ferries full at $5 a car or ferries half full at $10 a car.

Jack the Ripper—a U.K. coverup?

LONDON (Reuter) — A royal love affair, a freemason conspiracy and a big government cover-up were at the bottom of the Jack-the-Ripper murder mystery which has intrigued Britons for 90 years, says a new book published Wednesday.

Author Stephen Knight, who researched the gruesome murders of East End prostitutes in 1888, claims three killers were involved, including Queen Victoria's personal physician.

He says the victims—records differ between five and eight were all eliminated after they tried to blackmail the British government over a secret marriage between Princess Alexandra's eldest son, Prince Eddy, later the Duke of Clarence, and a comely shopgirl named Annie Crook. The marriage produced a daughter.

The alleged villains were Prime Minister Lord Salisbury who supposedly ordered the freemasons to silence the blackmailers and Sir William Gull, the Queen's physician, who, the book says, carried out the freemason conspiracy aided by a coachman named John Netley and the Assistant Commissioner of Police, Sir Robert Anderson.

The book, Jack the Ripper—The Final Solution, exonerates the aged Queen Victoria, who, it says, suspected a cover-up but had no knowledge of the conspiracy.

The author, who says he was allowed to examine secret Scotland Yard files on the mystery, writes that it all began when painter Walter Sickert introduced the young prince to the shopgirl.

They fell in love, a daughter was born and the prince went through a secret Catholic wedding ceremony.

But when news of the affair reached the government, it felt a scandal would give the coup de grace to an already unpopular monarchy. Lord Salisbury staged a raid on the lovers' hideout at Sickert's home during which the prince was seized. Annie Crook was certified insane and confined to Sir William Guy's hospital until her death 32 years later.

But an Irish nanny, Marie Kelly, escaped with the couple's child. The nanny told the story to some East End prostitutes who planned a blackmail plot which cost them their lives.

The alleged killers, led by Sir William, enticed the girls one by one into a coach and mutilated them, giving the impression that the murders were the work of a sex maniac.

Most of the book's evidence is based on a story told by Sickert to his son Joseph, whose mother was alleged to have been the daughter of the prince and the shopgirl. She later became the painter's mistress.

Campbell River festival

Lunch Bunch Boogie race biggest thrill

The Lunch Bunch Boogie down the Campbell River, this town's answer to Nanaimo's bathtub race, proved to be the highlight of the ninth annual Salmon Festival.

Hundreds of people lined the raft-race route to watch flimsy inner-tube, plywood and styrofoam concoctions attempt to navigate the currents of the Campbell while avoiding rocks, stumps and bridge pilings.

At 1 p.m., 256 daredevils for a day left the confines of the logboom holding pen, jockeyed for position and tried desperately to stay on their vessels.

Many rafters met their Waterloo at a logging bridge one mile from the starting point, losing control and slamming into wooden pilings or rear-ending other rafts also trying to negotiate the narrow openings between pilings.

Splintered plywood, rope and innertubes swept under the bridge as local scuba divers rescued crash victims from the disaster scene.

The race was won by the North Island Snowmobile Association in record time of 27 minutes, 16 seconds.

The crew picked up a trophy, $50 and a bottle of champagne.

The Lunch Bunch, a group of fun-loving local residents who originated the idea, have already started making plans for next year's race.

Another feature of the five-day festival was the World Championship Oyster Eating Contest held at Foreshore Park beneath rainy skies.

This year's winner was three-time champion Lorne Orr, Campbell River, who consumed 65 raw oysters weighing 4½ ounches each in one-half hour. The number fell fell short of a record set by Orr in 1973 when he downed 134, but as one official explained, "they were a lot bigger this year." Orr also took top place in 1974.

Another repeat winner

Another repeat winner was Mrs. Hilda Dennis, Vancouver, who gulped 10½ oysters in one minute to run away with the women's honors. Mrs. Dennis was in less than top form doing far better in 1973 with a total of 52 oysters.

The celebration was kicked off with a parade down Island Highway. Some 65 entries from all over Vancouver Island, competed for honors. The Pacific Maple Leaf Band from Victoria was the only out-of-town winner, scoring top points for the majorettes entry.

Foreshore Park, normally a wide, grassy area in the centre of town, was crammed with visitors who browsed through an estimated 30 booths set up by local and down-Island craftsmen. A food fair, covered for the first year, offered festival-goers such treats as smoked salmon and steamed clams.

The immensely popular Cod-Jiggers stomp was sold out well before the dance when an estimated 1,200 jammed into Strathcona Gardens to hear three bands play rock and roll.

About 13 entries braved rainy weather to compete in the annual four-mile canoe race down the Campbell River. Ron Atkins and Al Dumas of the Northwest Brigade Canoe Club of Prince George finished well ahead of rival entries from Canal Flats in the East Kootenay, completing the route in 45 minutes.

In a Salmon Festival fishing derby, local fisherman Brian Develin landed a 34-pound, one-ounce spring, taking home $300 and a trophy, while Clarence Miller, also of Campbell River, won $125 and a trophy for his seven-pound, seven-ounce coho.

About 500 fishermen vyed for the top awards and the two winners brought their fish in just four minutes before closing times each night.

Second prize went to Ivan Knowles, Campbell River for a 32-pound, 11-ounce spring, and Glen Boyd of Sooke was awarded third prize of $100 for a 32-pound, eight-ounce spring.

LARGE PETROGLYPH boulder was bulldozed in 1963 from Fulford Harbour floor at an extreme low tide during construction of Cudmore log dump, according to the book Indian Petroglyphs of the Pacific Northwest, by Beth and Ray Hill, published by Hancock House Publishers Ltd. in 1974. Book also mentions two smaller boulders with petroglyphs discovered at the same time.

Salt Spring petroglyph boulder

He wants to 'set record straight'

By HUBERT BEYER
Colonist Reporter

An angry Gordon Cudmore of Salt Spring Island "set the record straight" Wednesday with regard to a three-ton petroglyph boulder now sitting on his property, next to a airstrip he built several years ago.

The boulder with a large face carved into its surface will stay right where it is, and Cudmore has a letter from Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy saying so.

Cudmore lashed back at critics who recently accused him of removing the boulder from his log dump at Fulford Harbor on Salt Spring.

In an interview, he said he found the boulder below low-water mark with just the tip sticking out of the mud.

He found it while logging under contract with B.C. Forest Products.

Cudmore needed rocks at the time to protect a log dump, so he moved it temporarily to someone else's property.

"Nobody knew that the rock was where I found it, and nobody would have ever known, because it was in the mud in an area you can't get to," Cudmore said.

"Where it's now, people can see it; there's a road leading to the airstrip," he added.

"If anyone has a right to the rock, it's me, and next in line would be the Indians," Cudmore said.

The people who have objected most loudly to removal of the petroglyph boulder, he said, were the ones who wanted it for themselves.

He listed four names of people who had asked him for the boulder; one wanted to put it into a school, another in front of his store, the third wanted it moved to Centennial Park and the fourth to another store.

Cudmore criticized Mrs. McCarthy for not telling the B.C. Legislature a month ago that she had allowed him to leave the boulder at the present location.

At the time, Robert Skelly, New Democratic Party MLA for Alberni, asked in the Legislature whether charges would be laid against Cudmore for removing the petroglyph.

Cudmore said Mrs. McCarthy knew then that she had already given him permission to keep the boulder where it was.

An order-in-council, he said, had designated the rock as a historical site on May 19. Skelly raised the question in the Legislature in early June.

Cudmore also said that two other petroglpy boulders found by him at the same time (early spring), had disappeared.

"How come nobody is making a fuss about those rocks? They were stolen," he said.

One of the boulders, Cudmore added, had a quarter-moon carving on it.

He blamed old animosities for the fuss over his removal of the petroglyph.

Several years ago, Cudmore built an airstrip on his property, and the project was bitterly opposed by a number of Salt Spring Island residents.

He said the same people who opposed the airstrip had opposed the removal of the boulder.

"But nobody talks of the good the airstrip is doing. I don't get a penny's revenue out of it," he said.

Among those using the airstrip, he said, were the Canadian Coast Guard, forestry officials, the RCMP and some of those who tried to stop him from building it at the time.

"I built the airstrip because I wanted to fly, but it's been of benefit to the whole community at no cost to them," he said.

Cudmore said he hoped the whole thing would soon be forgotten.

"I think it was extremely unfair; the press reports made me look like a common thief," he said.

"I've been here since 1927 and I don't want to do anything detrimental to the community," Cudmore said.

Mrs. McCarthy wasn't available for comment on the matter Wednesday.

Well-water issue beginning to boil

By CRAIG MEREDITH
Colonist Correspondent

DUNCAN — The district of North Cowichan's response to this city's objection to the extension of water boundaries is not accepted by Mayor Ken Paskin.

The Duncan mayor told the Colonist Wednesday he was still seeking a plan showing the municipality's waterworks system which services the area adjacent to the city of Duncan along with a plan showing future extensions.

"When we get these plans, we want to retain an independent engineering consultant to study them and give us his opinion on whether this expansion is going to duplicate our services.

"Until this is done I won't be satisfied that this will not result," Paskin said.

This reaction comes after a prepared statement was released to the press Wednesday under the name of North Cowichan Mayor Gerry Smith, outlining the council's feelings on the city of Duncan's objections to the extension of the Southend water boundaries.

The city of Duncan water system — two groundwater wells on the north side of Cowichan River — currently supplies more than 1,000 homes in the Southend of the municipality of North Cowichan, and city council is concerned Duncan will not be able to recoup its investment.

Smith said in his press release the municipality has been anxious to establish a joint water board with Duncan and the city has been sent a proposed bylaw draft to this effect.

"Copies of this bylaw were distributed to the city of Duncan representatives on March 16, 1975 . . . to this date, the city has not commented on this proposal," Smith stated.

In response to this the Duncan mayor said Wednesday that it sounds great in theory but in practice the city would be the loser because it is the one who has made the greatest investment in servicing the area, not the municipality.

"That is similar to a pauper asking a millionaire to pool his money with him and then they will make joint investments . . . I don't think that is fair to the taxpayers of Duncan.

"But seriously, if they were really concerned about supplying the best and most economical service to the residents in the Southend of their municipality, they would go one step further and ask to amalgamate their service with ours, instead of duplicating it," Paskin said.

Referring to the study on restructuring of boundaries currently being conducted in Cowichan Valley, the Duncan mayor said it was ludicrous for upgrading to continue on the neighboring systems without some basic plan incorporating the possibility of amalgamation of municipal areas.

"And that is what we are asking for when we request plans showing their waterworks system and a plan of future extensions," he said.

At the present time, the district of North Cowichan has also proposed a $2,830,000 capital improvement to its system in the Southend of the municipality and is seeking financial aid from the provincial government.

The public works chairman, Ald. Ron McKinnon, has stated it will be compatible with the city of Duncan water system if amalgamation takes place, but no plans outlining these improvements have been shown, or discussed with Duncan city council to substantiate this.

One interesting point is that these improvements will include the purchase of a parcel of property on the south bank of the Cowichan River at a cost of more than $70,000 for a well site.

Less than a mile away, the city of Duncan has a test well drilled but not in production, with an estimated capacity of 2.4 million gallons a day.

Estimates recalled

DUNCAN — Kondra Engineering Ltd., now acting for the municipality of North Cowichan on the proposed water system upgrading, estimated one year ago in a Colonist story that the city test well could supply a population of 25,000.

In the same story it was reported the city of Duncan had offered to bring the well into production in order to supply the increasing needs of the municipality's southend, but North Cowichan indicated it was no longer interested in long-term water supply from the city of Duncan.

Jumping to conclusion

Eighty-two riders and horses from all over Pacific Northwest and Alberta congregated in Duncan to compete in recent three-day equestrian event. Barry Oland of Vancouver took top honors in the intermediate division, while Nick Holmes-Smith of Kelowna captured the preliminary and Jan Stratton of Duncan won the training division.

Nanaimo's hospital raises some fees

By FRED CURRIE
Colonist Correspondent

NANAIMO — In an effort to stem what officials call the "over-utilization of emergency facilities" at Nanaimo hospital, a 100-per-cent increase in the cost of non-emergency care has been instituted.

Hospital administrator Gordon Frith said Wednesday that the increase is also being put into effect because of the need for fiscal restraint, which is being exercised in all aspects of hospital and health care in the province.

Up to now, the rate for non-emergency medical attention in the hospital's out-patient department was $5 but Frith said the new $10 charge now is in effect.

"The over-utilization of the hospital's emergency department by members of the public who find it convenient to go to the hospital to intercept a doctor for minor problems, rather than seeing him in his office, is creating the deepest concern to both hospital and medical authorites," Frith said.

The rate has not just gone up as Frith added that non-emergency treatment will not be given unless the $10 is deposited at the time of treatment.

The rates for emergency situations, involving accidental injury involving wounds, burns, fractures, sprains and shock, providing treatment is sought within 24 hours of the accident, acute illness such as collapse, coma, hysteria, chest pain and others, minor surgery and elective minor surgery booked by a physician, will remain unchanged at $2 per incident.

"Hospital authorities hope that members of the public will co-operate with the staff," Frith said, "to facilitate the adequate treatment of an ever-increasing emergency-type of admission to the emergency department."

Accused flayed by judge

By JOYCE HOWRIGAN

COURTENAY — Anyone with a permit to be in possession of a firearm has a high duty to use it responsibly, Judge Donald Ward of Parksville told a 63-year-old man who pleaded guilty in provincial court this week to carrying a concealed weapon.

Lawrence M. Quebec of Courtenay, electing trial by magistrate, was fined $500 and placed on probation for two years after Ward heard evidence that Quebec had threatened three people during an incident at the Mexicana Motor Inn on June 23.

RCMP had entered a room in the motel on a call from one of the guests and discovered Quebec was carrying a loaded pistol.

In passing sentence, Ward commented on the controversial nature of new legislation regarding firearms. "Society is resorting to weapons far too easily . . . If someone, like yourself, with a fairly impeccable background can come before the courts (accused) of an act of utter irresponsibility, it is an example of why we need gun laws."

The probation order prohibits Quebec from owning, carrying, or possessing any firearm or other form of weapon. He was also ordered to forfeit the pistol used in the incident.

William Robert Stelfox, 19, of Comox, who pleaded guilty to a charge of possessing one ounce of cannabis marijuana, was held in custody until the afternoon sitting of court after Ward demanded to know if the accused had a criminal record. Later, he was fined $500.

The court was told he had tried to escape apprehension last March when RCMP were called to check a back alley between Fifth and Sixth streets, and that he had previous convictions related to drinking and driving and possession.

Vandals rampage

NANAIMO — RCMP Wednesday began investigating several incidents involving vandalism and break-ins.

Vandals broke eight windows in the Rock City school overnight. A damage estimate was not available. It was the second time in a week that vandals hit the school.

Elsewhere a windshield in a truck on a car sales lot was smashed. A house at 803 Short Street was entered and about $25 taken and a room at the Commercial Hotel was entered and two wallets, both containing credit cards, were stolen.

Police also said the Cranberry Hotel was entered and an empty cash register taken.

Dog's death costly

NANAIMO — Two men from Gabriola Island have been fined $150 each after being found guilty of unlawfully shooting a dog.

The two were charged after the animal's owner, Olav Sleeph of Gabriola Island, complained to RCMP that his dog Thorn, a German shepherd which was the son of the famous television dog hero The Littlest Hobo, had been shot for no apparent reason.

The two men Gary Hague, 21, and Sid Skinner, 30, told the court that the dog had been running sheep on the island and when spotted by the two, it was in among a group of grazing sheep.

However, provincial court judge Jack Caldwell said in handing down his verdict Tuesday, that there was no evidence to support the men's claim.

In the Nov. 7 incident, the court was told, the dog was shot and its body discarded in nearby bush.

In another case, a young Nanaimo man, John James MacDonald, 18, of 885 Malaspina Crescent, has been committed for county court trial on a charge of assault causing bodily harm.

The charge was laid from an incident which arose during a commercial Hockey League game in Nanaimo March 26.

West German celebration

Indians help festival

OTTAWA (CP) — A group of Canadian native people are leaving for West Germany to participate in the 25th anniversary of an Indian festival that never before has had major Indian participation.

Fifteen Haida dancers from the Queen Charlotte Islands plus nine artists, including two from Saskatchewan, will spend three weeks at a festival in Bad Segeberg near Hamburg.

They are being assisted by a $11,500 grant from the external affairs department plus some transportation from the armed forces.

The Canadians will be joining the Karl May Festival, held for the last 25 years in the 10,000-seat amphitheatre in Bad Segeberg.

Karl May was an author who in the 1800s drew from existing works to write 72 novels about North American Indians and the development of the North American West.

Tony Belcourt, Ottawa consultant who arranged the trip, said in a recent interview the books are still used as texts in West German schools and are fairly accurate and sympathetic to the Indian cause.

"The people there know more about Indians than most North Americans," said the former president of the Native Council of Canada.

Several plays have been written from the May works and these are the focal point of the festival, which draws audiences from throughout West Germany and from neighboring countries, Belcourt said.

The Haida dancers — called Eagle Dancers after their Eagle clan — will be joined by seven West Coast artists. Three men, Red Davidson, Denis Hanuse and Beau Dick were carving a six-foot totem pole in Vancouver that would be completed at the festival and presented to the city.

The British Columbians will be joined by Ken Goodwell, a Saskatchewan Sioux singer and dancer, and Ed Lavalee, a Cree dancer who is the former director of the Indian Cultural Centre in Saskatchewan.

The artists will conduct workshops when not performing. The oldest member of the dancing group is Ada Yovonovich, 72. The youngest is her nine-year-old niece Kim.

Angolian hearing fair but outcome rapped

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg lawyer George Lockwood says procedures in the recent trial of 13 mercenaries in Angola may have been generally fair, but the outcome was less than just.

Lockwood attended the trial on the invitation of the Angolan government as one of 44 observers from more than 30 countries.

Four mercenaries — three from Britain and one from the U.S. — were sentenced to the executed, and nine others sentenced to various prison terms.

Lockwood said he was surprised at only one of the sentences — the death penalty for U.S. citizen Daniel Gearhart.

He described Gearhart as "a silly little ass" who had been in Angola for only a few days and did not deserve the sentence because he hadn't really been involved in the fighting.

He said that in his opinion, Gearhart should not have been on trial at all, since he got himself implicated by talking too much about things in which he wasn't involved.

Lockwood is an executive member of the Canadian section of Amnesty International, a voluntary organization which protests persecution of political prisoners. He is also a part-time judge in Manitoba's provincial judges court.

Considering general differences in the judicial systems of countries around the world, he said, the trial in Angola observed basic courtroom principles.

However, he said there were prejudices in the trial and some of the charges were somewhat unusual.

The 13 were charged with being mercenaries, a charge that "I don't think really exists in Angolan law."

As well, they were charged with acting against peace, similar to charges laid in Nuremberg after the Second World War.

"But that was an international tribunal, while the Angolan case was a national trial."

Lockwood said he was impressed with the fairness of the chief judge of the five-man court, but the chief and one other judge were the only ones with solid legal training.

He was critical of the court's decision to allow the prosecution to show a gory film about mercenaries, which had no relevance to the accused or the situation and was inflammatory.

As well, he found the court too generous in allowing political statements and hearsay evidence during the trial.

The court did not specify when the executions would take place, and in the meantime Britain and the U.S. are attempting to have the sentences reduced on humanitarian grounds.

MPs look well ahead for extra six days off

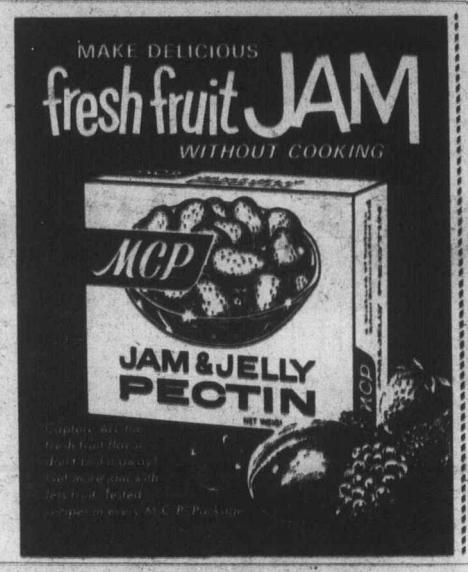

OTTAWA (CP)—MPs have decided to give themselves another six days off this century, phovided the Commons is sitting in late June and July in 1982, 1993 and 1999.

The decision came when the Commons unanimously approved a motion by Social Credit MP Adrien Lambert (Bellechasse) that the House not sit on following Fridays when the June 24 St. Jean Baptiste Day and July 1 national holidays fall on Thursday.

The Commons took last Friday off following the Thursday July 1 holiday. But it sat the Friday before after taking the Thursday, June 24 holiday off in honor of the patron saint of Quebec.

Sheet steel demand holding up

TORONTO (CP) — Demand for sheet steel in Canada remains strong in such areas as automotive and appliance industries but demand for steel remains weak in heavy construction and transportation industries, says an official of the Steel Co. of Canada Ltd. (Stelco), Toronto.

A. R. McMurrich, vice-president of marketing for the company, said industry exports of hot-and cold-rolled sheet steel are good but "not sensational for Stelco in particular."

The company might have exported more at the end of 1973 and in 1974 but domestic demand was strong, he said.

Figures from Statistics Canada show that sheet and strip steel exports were up 42.8 per cent in the first fourth months of this year, compared with the similar period a year earlier.

A market analyst said exports last April were the highest since December, 1972, but that mills have reacted responsibly to demands of the domestic market.

An official of Dominion Foundries and Steel Ltd., Hamilton, said domestic demand for sheet steel is stronger than expected and that the company has not booked an additional export order since last January.

William Simon, general sales manager, said the company has been "operating virtually at full capacity since late 1975."

Delivery dates have stretched out for sheet steel but the tightness of supply should peak only for six to eight weeks and be over by September, he said.

Simon said some factors contributing to the tightness have been an increase in automotive production schedules and production problems at other steel companies.

An official of Algoma Steel Corp. Ltd., Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., said the company finds demand for its sheet steel is holding up.

Donald McEachern, general manager, production sales, said demand for plate and heavy structural steels is weak. A plate price increase of $24 a ton, effective Aug. 1, probably will stick despite the weak demand, he said.

GM checkng bus steering

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — A spokesman for General Motors of Canada Ltd. said Tuesday that 714 GM bus units across Canada, but not in Victoria or Nanaimo, are being checked for a possible defect in the steering mechanism.

Some too popular

Shortage of cars

TORONTO (CP) — Buoyancy in the Canadian automobile market and increased sales in the United States might lead to shortages of some models of Canadian cars, industry officials say.

Representatives of North American automobile makers say inventories are adequate for the summer months but that shortages may develop in some of the more popular models.

M. J. Closs, vice-president of marketing for Chrysler Canada Ltd., said Wednesday his company has a 48-day supply of automobiles on hand. However, this includes cars in transit that will not reach dealer showrooms for about 15 days, decreasing the overall average supply to about 33 days, he said.

The company has only about a 15-day supply of fast-selling Volare and Aspen compacts introduced this model year, he said. The change to the 1977 model year begins this month at Canadian plants.

Closs said the company hopes to swing into the sale of 1977 models as quickly as possible and that some are expected to arrive in dealer showrooms in the third week of August.

A spokesman for Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd. said there is some tightness in the supply of popular Granada and Monarch models and in the full-size Ford, Marquis and Mercury lines. However, the company does not expect major supply problems, he said.

Pound climbs

BRUSSELS (UPI) — The British pound maintained its steady upward trend against the dollar Wednesday, as the Bank of England and the British treasury confirmed that Britain had spent over $1 billion of its standby credit to support its currency.

The Bank of England said Britain had spent part of the standby credits of $5.3 billion it had received from 12 countries after its reserves were depleted by support for the pound. A treasury official, while not disclosing the amount, said the first drawings on the credit were made June 22.

Banking source estimates of the amount of the credit that Britain has spent range from $1 billion to $1.5 billion.

In London the pound improved from $1.803 to $1.80375.

'Karate chop' chance missed

U.K. banks stayed in Rhodesia

LONDON (Reuter) — Britain might have dealt a "karate chop" to Rhodesia's economy several years ago by forcing all British-controlled banks and other companies in the break-away colony to close, says the head of the giant Lonrho trading company.

Roland (Tiny) Rowland, in a letter to his lawyer made public Wednesday, said he had once urged British authorities to take various courses of action which would have been effective against the white minority regime in the rebel African colony.

Rowland's allegation was the latest in a barrage of counter-charges against the British government following publication Tuesday of an official report critical of the company's business methods.

Asked to comment, a foreign office spokesman said that after Rhodesia broke with Britain in November, 1967, British subsidiaries there had acted as autonomous units and were virtually under the control of Salisbury authorities.

Rowland said Britain could have crippled the Rhodesian economy by forcing closure of British-controlled banks and other companies, but added "this was felt to damage the interest of British banking."

The letter added that as a result "British banking continues to be the commercial backbone of Rhodesia and British companies are the dependent ribs."

Rowland said another example of British failure to implement fully United Nations' sanctions against the Salisbury regime was in the supply of oil to Rhodesia.

After Lonrho shut its oil pipeline through Portuguese Mozambique, the state-owned British Petroleum (BP) oil company immediately began sending fuel to Rhodesia, he alleged.

BP has denied that it broke UN sanctions.

A volumious government report criticizing Lonrho's business ethics dominated the front pages of Britain's newspapers Wednesday.

Government inspectors documented a complex account of financial links between Lonrho directors, lavish rent-free housing, take-over deals, expense claims and special payments to company associates, reviving arguments about ethics in the world of high finance.

It also spotlighted the flamboyant personality of Rowland the company's chief executive a burly six-footer accustomed to getting his own way.

Under Rowland's leadership, Lonrho spread from an obscure mining company in Rhodesia to a sprawling conglomerate, employing 100,000 people whose activities cover 43 countries.

In the last two years, Rowland has forged links with the ruling family in Kuwait and Arab interests now have a big stake in the company.

But the main casualty of the affair has been Angus Ogilvy, husband of Princess Alexandra, the Queen's cousin. Ogilvy's conduct as a former Lonrho director was severely criticized in the report.

Drillers were active

CALGARY (CP) — The oil industry's drilling activity showed a significant increase in the first six months of 1976 and some drilling rigs which left western Canada in the second half of 1975 have returned.

As of June 26 this year, oil and gas well completions in Canada totalled 2,401, compared with 1,738 for the same period last year. Footage increased to 7,865,637 from 6,223,333.

Stan Jones, general manager of the Canadian Association of Oilwell Drilling Contractors, said the number of rigs in western Canada dropped to 275 at the end of last year from 332 in mid-1975.

However, some of the rigs returned in the first half of this year and the number stood at 291 in mid-1976.

Jones said that in May, usually a light month for drilling, the rig utilization rate this year was 36 per cent, more than double the rate of 16 per cent in May, 1975.

The utilization rate in the last winter drilling season—from mid-December to the end of March—was among the highest in recent years, peaking at 90 per cent.

Jones said the upswing in drilling activity, especially in Alberta where the number of well completions increased to 2,141 in the first half of this year from 1,506 a year ago, resulted from a general improvement in the political climate.

Shamrocks outlast Adanacs with productive power-play

By JIM TANG

Victoria Shamrocks never quite lost the edge of a quick 7-1 lead Wednesday night in Memorial Arena but they toyed with the idea a number of times before coming away with an 18-15 conquest of Coquitlam Adanacs.

The Western Lacrosse Association leaders, now out front by seven points, made excellent use of power-play chances as they continued their yo-yo existence and made things interesting for the 1858 fans by always managing to pull out of their skids just in time.

With Ivan Thompson and Danny Green moving the ball around well and profiting from the chances, the Shamrocks scored seven times when they had the odd man. Their effective power play gave them their big early lead, and it also clinched the points.

In between, however, the Shamrocks seemed determined to keep things as exciting as they have managed to do in almost every game this season. They were 7-1 before the game was 11 minutes old, and then went into a lapse which was broken from time to time with well-taken goals just when it seemed Adanacs were finally going to make it to the front.

Ordinary goalkeeping, some bad penalties and some loose checking soon had the Shamrocks in trouble. Adanacs scored four power-play goals between 12:20 of the first period and 8:56 of the second to get to 6-8. But they were only to come close, and they did it often—at 8-9, 9-10 and 10-11 in the second period and at 13-14 in the third.

Each time it seemed the game had been turned, and each time the Shamrocks turned it back.

Larry Bell, the constant hustler, and Skip Chapman were the key men as the Shamrocks met the last serious challenge.

Bell, who had three goals and did all of his scoring in the last 22 minutes, delayed the Adanac surge in the third period with a goal at 6:21 which restored a three-goal lead. Then after the Adanacs had reached 13-14, Bell started and finished off the play which gave the Shamrocks a two-goal margin.

Chapman, who had relieved George Grover late in the second period, stopped a Coquitlam surge then, making four great stops in the space of less than two minutes to allow Shamrocks to stay at 16-13.

Although Rhys Parsons did cut the lead to two goals, that broke the Coquitlam charge and it was definitely over at 16:22 when Ray Durante drew a major penalty for spearing Norm Baker. Shamrocks made sure then, scoring two more power-play goals to zoom to 18-14.

Thompson, who was in on five power-play goals, led both clubs with nine points, seven of them assists. Joe McCrea had three goals and five assists, Ron MacNeil had three goals and three assists, and Dan Green a goal and six assists.

Kevin Parsons, with three goals and three assists, George Musseau, with four goals, and Rhys Parsons, with three goals and an assist, were the most-productive losers.

It was a Bland day Wednesday in the girls' division of the Pacific Northwest regional junior tennis championships, which concluded at the Racquet Club of Victoria.

Sisters Jennifer and Nina Bland won the singles titles in the under-16 and under-18 divisions, respectively, then teamed to win the under-18 doubles.

Nina Bland, second seeded in under-18s, scored the biggest upset of the day, downing top-seeded Brenda Cameron of the Racquet Club, 3-6, 6-1 and 6-2, while top-ranked Jennifer had her problems before defeating Karen Kettenacker of Vancouver, 1-6, 7-6, 6-4.

The Blands then scored a 6-4, 6-4 decision over Lori Barlow of Victoria and Jenny Grantham of Phoenix in the doubles final.

Two other Victoria girls scored singles victories, Val Bryce in the under-14 division and unranked Kelly Davies in the under-12s.

Miss Bryce stopped Lynn Bloomer of Vancouver, 4-6, 6-3, 6-3, while Miss Davies posted a 6-0, 6-4 decision over Vivian McAdam of Vancouver.

In the under-14 doubles, Miss Bloomer and Ruth Kilgour of Vancouver were 6-4, 6-1 winners over Miss Bryce and Grace McCully of Vancouver.

In the boys' division, top-seeded Steve Volrich of Vancouver had little difficulty scoring a 6-4, 6-1 decision over Gerald Clerx of Vancouver in the under-18 singles final. Volrich and Clerx then teamed for a 6-3, 6-2 victory over John Nichols and Mike Kerr of Vancouver in the under-18 doubles final.

Nichols stopped Arnold Kettenacker of Vancouver, 7-5, 6-0, in the under-16 singles final.

In the under-14 singles, Joseph Bedoya of Hawaii was a 6-4, 2-6, 7-6 winner over Laird Dunlop of Ottawa; and Rick Hunter and Tony Frost of Vancouver were 6-3, 6-2 winners over Steve Haqq and John Bowering of Vancouver in the under-14 doubles.

In the under-12 singles, Mike Young topped John Borchert, 6-2, 6-4, in an all-Vancouver final.

Czech leads cycle test

TROIS-RIVIERES, Que. (CP) — Milan Puzela of Czechoslovakia held the lead after the first stage of the Quebec Grand Prix cycling race Wednesday.

Puzela covered the 90-mile distance between Quebec and Trois-Rivieres in three hours, six minutes and 50 seconds and came in just ahead of four other competitors who finished with the same time.

A. Hessink of the Netherlands was second, Wokciech Matusiak of Poland was third, Mike Neel of the United States was fourth and Houwelingen A Van of the Netherlands was fifth.

There was some confusion at the end of the first stage as to which of the first five racers had crossed the finish line first. Finally judges issues the results showing Puzela on top.

Vladimir Vomdracek of Czechoslovakia was listed sixth, Stanislaw Szozda of Poland was seventh followed by Vastimil Moravec of Czechoslovakia, Ivan Popov of Bulgaria and Bill Nickson of Great Britain.

Tom Morris of Victoria was the best Canadian in the race, placing 14th after the first stage.

More than 80 cyclists, representing more than one dozen countries, left Quebec Wednesday in a sweltering 30-degree temperature on the first stage of the 450-mile event.

The five-stage race is to end Sunday at St. Zotique, Que., 45 miles southwest of Montreal and near the Ontario border.

In addition to the Canadian Olympic team, cyclists from this Quebec's A team, Australia, Bulgaria, Belgium, the United States, Britain, Holland, Italy, Jamaica, Poland, Czechoslovakia, the Soviet Union and Venezuela were entered in the fifth edition of the event.

'Caps obtain midfielder

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Whitecaps of the North American Soccer League have signed Wolfgang Suhnholz, a West German midfielder, who had been playing with the Boston Minutemen.

General-manager Denny Veitch said the deal involved an undisclosed amount of cash. Suhnholtz, 5-feet-10, 163 pounds, is a 29-year-old native of Berlin and played with Bayern Munich, Oberhausen, Tennis Borussia of Berlin and Grasshoppers of Zurich.

In Challenge Series

Haslam and Smith to resume rivalry

Roy Smith and Roy Haslam, two of Victoria's finest drivers, will renew acquaintances after nearly seven years next week when the International Drivers Challenge series makes two stops at Western Speedway.

Smith, who drives the Dick Midgely-owned 1976 Chevelle on the NASCAR circuit and has been at the wheel of the Daffodil Special supermodified in recent years, will be driving the No. 21 car, formerly handled by Gary Kershaw, Tuesday and Thursday — the fourth and fifth races on the seven-stop series for superstocks.

Smith, who competed in the Daytona 500 earlier this year, will start practice runs in the Harvey Chipper-owned 1969 Chevelle tonight.

In making his first appearance in the IDC superstock series, Smith will be in against some of the top drivers in the Pacific Northwest, including Haslam, the third-place finisher in last year's series.

Haslam, a veteran on the superstock circuit, has his 1965 Chevelle in top condition and will participate in all seven races, starting with the opener Friday night at Tacoma's Spanaway Speedway. The series continues Saturday at Skagit Speedway at Mt. Vernon, Wash., and Olympia's Tenino Speedway on Sunday before moving to Vancouver Island. Following Tuesday and Thursday races, the action switches to Yakima Speedway on July 17 and Portland Speedway on July 18.

Also entered are defending-champion Ron Eaton of Tacoma, veteran Hershel McGriff of Bridal Veil, Ore. — winner of 15 of 34 main events in the seven-year history of the series — Ernie Stierly of Portland, currently one of the hottest drivers in the Pacific Northwest, and NASCAR veteran Harry Jefferson of Naches, Wash., who will be making his first appearance on the IDC circuit.

Eaton has won eight of 11 NASCAR or open main events entered this year and should be the one to beat in his 1970 Nova.

However, there are a number of new drivers on the circuit this season and it should be one of the most closely-contested series.

Bryce Mann, present leader in the Can-Am superstock series, will be the first-ever driver from Saskatchewan to compete; Reg Kennedy of Surrey, 1975 Western Canadian NASCAR champion, will be here along with Eric Dowler of Edmonton, runner-up in the 1975 Canadian NASCAR series.

Other entries include 1974 IDC champion Ross Surgenor of Victoria, working hard to get his 1969 Cougar in race condition; the Becker brothers — Randy and Rick — from Highland, Calif., and Rick Parr of Port Angeles, the youngest driver in the IDC series last year at only 16.

Time trials for the two events here are at 7 p.m. with racing to follow at 8 each night.

Host girls nab titles

Gordon Head teams captured both divisions of the B.C. girls' Little League softball championships Wednesday at Majestic Park.

The Victoria girls scored seven runs in the fourth inning ad went on to a 10-3 decision over Dawson Creek in the Division I (13-15) final and finished with a 3-0 record. In the Division II (12 and under) final, Gordon Head posted a 9-4 victory over Dawson Creek to finish the three-team event with a 3-1 won-loss mark.

Sandy Allen scattered three hits to earn the victory in the Division I game while Val O'Brien allowed only four hits in winning the Division II contest.

Reds complete sweep with three-run rally

Mike Lum's sacrifice fly scored Cesar Geronimo with the winning run in the ninth inning as Cincinnati Reds completed a three-game sweep over Montreal Expos with a 4-3 victory in National League baseball action Wednesday night.

The Reds rallied from a 3-1 deficit when Joe Morgan and Dan Driessen led off the ninth inning with singles and Geronimo tied the game with a triple to right centre, chasing Expos starter and loser Steve Rogers, 2-7.

In other National League games, Chicago Cubs shut out San Diego Padres, 10-0; Los Angeles Dodgers edged Philadelphia Phillies, 6-5; San Francisco Giants beat St. Louis Cardinals, 3-2; Pittsburgh Pirates downed Atlanta Braves, 9-7; and New York Mets defeated Houston Astros, 12-4.

Dale Murray came in to face Lum and surrendered the game-winning stroke before getting pinch-hitter Johnny Bench to ground out and striking out Doug Flynn.

Manny Trillo's three-run homer highlighted a five-run third inning and Rick Reuschel pitched the Cubs' third consecutive shutout. Mike Schmidt's two-base error, his second of the game, let in the winning run as Los Angeles rallied for its win over the Phillies.

Darrell Evans slammed a lead-off home run in the top of the ninth inning to carry San Francisco past St. Louis. Manny Sanguillen drove home two runs with his first home run of the season as Pittsburgh beat Atlanta.

John Milner extended his hitting streak to 13 games with a double and a single to lead the Mets past Houston.

In the American League, Chicago White Sox downed Boston Red Sox, 6-3; Detroit Tigers edged Texas Rangers, 2-1; Minnesota Twins beat Milwaukee Brewers, 8-2; Kansas City Royals edged New York Yankees, 2-1 and California Angels edged Cleveland Indians, 2-0.

Nolan Ryan blanked the Indians on five hits and Bobby Bonds handled the offence with a home run and run-scoring double in the Angels victory.

At Detroit, hard-luck Bert Blyleven hit Ben Oglivie with a pitch with the bases loaded in the eighth inning and Rusty Staub followed with a sacrifice fly to give Detroit a pair of runs which proved enough for the Tigers.

Dave Lemanczyk and winner John Hiller, 7-4, blanked the Rangers until the ninth when rookie Steve Grilli pitched out of a bases-loaded jam with only one run scoring.

That, however, was the first run the Rangers scored for Blyleven, 6-10, during the first nine innings in any of his last four starts. He pitched a pair of 1-0 10-inning victories but was blanked in turn 1-0 in his last outing.

Film date alters

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Film Institute has extended the deadline to July 15 for entries in competitions here in August as part of an international animated film festival.

The festival, sanctioned by the International Animated Film Association and the International Federation of Film Producers, is the first in North America. To be held at the National Arts Cente Aug. 10-15, it is similar to earlier festivals in Annecy France, and Zagreb, Yugoslavia.

Entries from 13 countries have already been filed, but last month's interruption of air services in Canada prompted the institute to extend the deadline by two weeks.

More than 100 participants, mostly teachers, students and professional film-makers, have also registered for workshop sessions at the University of Ottawa Aug. 9-14.

Norman McLaren, internationally-recognized National Film Board animator, will be chairman of the festival, and a retrospective of his work will be shown.

In the competition, awards will be made for animation in commercials and public service announcements, which the institute said are some of the most creative but least recognized aspects of the film animation industry.

Other competitions include films running less than three minutes, films for children, films for education, first films, student films, and films running longer than three minutes.

Entries so far have been received from Australia, Belgium, Canada, France, Holland, Iran, Japan, Norway, Switzerland, the United Kingdom, the United States, Venezuela, and Yugoslavia.

Ogilvy leaves firms

LONDON (Reuter) — Angus Ogilvy, the Queen's cousin by marriage, has resigned from a number of industrial directorships Tuesday following publication of a government report critical of the controversial Lonhro international trading company.

The report was referred to the Director of Public Prosecutions who will decide whether any court action should be undertaken.

The activities of Lonhro, which has vast mining and trading interests in Africa and the Middle East, were branded in 1973 as "the unacceptable face of capitalism" by former prime minister Edward Heath.

Ogilvy, one of seven directors criticized for conduct of Lonhro's affairs, promptly resigned from the boards of other companies on which he served.

"Under the circumstances, I feel this is the only honorable thing to do," said Ogilvy who is married to Princess Alexandra.

Three held in theft of relics

COLOGNE, West Germany (AP) — Three Yugoslavs have admitted stealing treasures from Cologne cathedral last year with the help of mountain climbing gear.

Police and officials of the Cologne state attorney's office said 40 per cent of the cathedral's gem-encrusted relics have been recovered.

The relics, stolen Nov. 2, are insured for $800,000 but are considered priceless.

Spokesmen said Branislaw Tunjic, 23, and Viliam Dalavale, 27, were arrested in Zurich, Switzerland, June 17. Ljubomir Ernst, 43, was apprehended in Milan last Saturday and his wife Johanna, 36, is under investigative detention in Belgrade, authorities said.

Friendly voice missing

Operators being replaced

Starting today more than 40,000 Victoria Evergreen phone subscribers will miss operators asking for their number when they make direct-distance dialed calls.

Automatic number identification equipment will automatically record customer's numbers when they dial 112 and direct-distance dial their own calls as a result of installation of a new $5 million electronic exchnage in B.C. Telephone Co.'s new downtown building.

The electronic computerized installation will provide all "38" exchange subscribers with electronic long distance service.

"This means that electronic equipment instantly identifies the originating number when the customer places a direct distance dialed long distance call," Bert Parker, Victoria district consumer service manager, explained.

However, subscribers in the "388" exchange currently receiving the automatic number identification service will lose this feature from now to Aug. 7 when equipment rearrangements now underway will be completed.

Starting Aug. 7, all "388" Evergreen subscribers will receive both local and direct distance dialing services with the new electronic machine.

"Today all '38' customers, whether using conventional dial or touch-calling phones, will notice a silence on their line after having placed their calls while the electronic equipment is processing them," Parker said. The silence does not indicate the call has gone astray.

By 1980 about 51 per centof phones in-service in the B.C. Telephone system will be under electronic common control, and by 1985 the target is 75 per cent.

Telegraph operators 'low risk'

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — If B.C. Workers' Compensation Board premium rates are any measure, the least hazardous job in the province belongs to telegraph operators.

Based on a WCB rate chart, telegraphers are lowest risk employees covered with a levy of 21 cents per $100 payroll.

Air transportation industry workers (excluding ground crews) are highest with pilots at the top with a levy of $15.17 per $100 payroll.

Close behind the telegraphers are architects and consulting engineers at 25 cents, film projectionists at 27 cents, trade union employees at 30 cents and retail store employees at 47 cents, while loggers are at $8.66.

Hydro employees start selective strike action

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Office and Technical Employees Union has started selective strike action against British Columbia Hydro and said Wednesday it plans to escalate the strikes until it resolves its dispute with the government corporation.

The 53 key-punch operators who were off the job Tuesday were joined Wednesday by 33 meter readers. A corporation spokesman said there was no appreciable effect on operations. Hydro employs 3,300 persons.

Fred Trotter, president of local 378 of the union, said although the union will step up strike activity, it will not do so in areas that might affect public safety.

He also said that union members have been asked to give 10 per cent of their wages to help finance the strike. He would not say how much this would raise but the payments would be voluntary.

Those who don't make the contributions will be asked to go on strike. If neither option is exercised, the member will be disciplined by the union.

"There is nothing new or unique about this," said Trotter. "The membership approved of this action at a recent meeting." Hydro's office workers have been without a contract since May 31, 1975.

Two months ago members voted 88 per cent in favor of strike action to back up their demands for a new contract. The union has banned all overtime since June 24.

Provincial mediator Charles Stewart failed in an attempt to reach a settlement of the contract dispute.

The union has been seeking a total wage increase of 19.7 per cent over 22 months.

The crown corporation has offered a wage boost of 6½ per cent to a maximum of $73 a month.

Soviets reduce radiation level

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The Soviet Union has sharply reduced the level of microwave radiation at the U.S. embassy in Moscow, the U.S. state department said Wednesday.

But department spokesman Robert Funseth voiced regret the Soviets have not eliminated entirely the radiation, believed to come from Soviet electronic jamming or eavesdropping devices.

Religion no reason for not paying dues

VANCOUVER (CP) — Employees exempted from union membership on religious grounds must contribute the equivalent of union dues to their union, Justice E. E. Hinkson ruled Wednesday.

The B.C. Supreme Court judge dismissed an action by three B.C. government employees, in which they claimed that a section of the Public Service Labor Relations Act requiring the contributions was beyond the powers of the provincial government.

The employees, A. John Price, Arnold N. Fraser, and B. Eileen McRae, sued the attorney-general, the minister of labor, the provincial Labor Relations Board and the queen in the right of the province for a declaration that a portion of Section 8 of the Public Service Labor Relations Act was ultra vires.

Each of the employees had refused to join the B.C. Government Employees' Union on the basis of religious beliefs, and in 1974 each was exempted from membership by order of the Labor Relations Board.

At the same time, the board ordered them to make a written assignment of wages to the union and they refused to do so.

Hinkson said that Section 8 of the act does not deal with the profession and dissemination of religious faith and the exercise of religious worship.

The B.C. Supreme Court also rejected an application by the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union Local 604 to find Seagram's strike-bound B.C. distillery in contempt of the labor board.

Justice S. Martin Toy ruled Tuesday no breach of a labor board order had been committed by the company.

The union had sought a writ that the company was in contempt of the order, issued April 28 last year.

The board order called on the company to end an illegal lockout of union members in the bottling section of the distillery.

The judge found the company had not breached the order because the union had previously authorized the strike.

B.C. aids transit services

Transit assistance is being extended to six B.C. municipalities, Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis announced Wednesday.

He said Trail, Kamloops, Prince Rupert, Maple Ridge, Kelowna and Penticton will receive more than $2.3 million in provincial funds for improved transit services.

The money will be split three ways — $1.7 million in buses and other investments, $500,000 in annual subsidies to cover half of anticipated operating deficits, and $125,000 in start-up costs.

The minister said the start-up dates for the transit services in the six centres depended on such things as completion of staff recruitment, municipal council approval of plans, negotiations with local transit operators, and the availability of buses.

New Zealand bans cargoes

WELLINGTON (Reuter) — New Zealand trade unionists will refuse to handle South African cargoes shipped to or from New Zealand for a five-week period starting Monday. The Federation of Labor described the ban as a protest against "the murderous attacks on women and children at Soweto" and the apartheid policies of the South African government.

Cancer study gets $3,700

A total of $3,700 has been presented to the Canadian Cancer Society by the United Commercial Travellers Council, Local 434.

The council has been making donations to cancer research for years, and a Western Canada Lottery agency granted to the council in 1974 has added to those donations.

Since 1974, $9,300 has gone to the society as a direct result of ticket sales.

In the most recent donation, $1,700 was raised through ticket sales and $2,000 was a "bonus" from reserve monies in the UCT's Western Fund, the result of excellent sales during the past year.

Arrests follow two explosions

Volynov and Zholobov

Everything's fine aboard Salyut-5

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Two Soviet cosmonauts docked their Soyuz-21 ferry vehicle Wednesday with the unmanned orbital station Salyut-5 and both transferred to it, Tass news agency reported.

Soviet television said the two men boarded Salyut, which was launched on June 22.

The regular television evening news program was interrupted for the special bulletin from ground control at Yevpatoria in the Crimea.

The cosmonauts, Col. Boris Volynov and Liet. Colonel Vitaly Zholobov, docked with the station nearly five hours before boarding it, the reporter said.

"The most difficult phase of their work has been completed," he said.

Another cosmonaut, Alexei Yeliseyev, told the television reporter that the two had carried out a visual check of Salyut and reported that everything on board was working normally.

Viking delayed again as search goes on

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — Viking scientists Wednesday postponed for the second time the landing of Viking 1 on Mars because the alternate site was discovered to be rougher than expected.

A spokesman said scientists are now looking at a more westerly area of the Chryse Planitia, where they said the terrain was smoother. But a landing cannot be made any earlier than July 20. They had planned a July 17 landing.

The second site, in the northwest territory of the original A-1 landing area, was rejected after scientists studied radar data that indicated it was more rugged than the original site.

"New radar results obtained July 3 and 4 at the Arecibo Observatory in Puerto Rico indicate that a more westerly area of Chryse Planitia may be smoother than the previously selected northwest site," a jet propulsion laboratory spokesman said.

The new site has not been photographed by Viking 1, but radar data has been obtained.

Construction

'Bad break' slows pact talks

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Reporter

An air of gloom settled over the embattled construction scene Wednesday leaving negotiators with little hope of early settlement to the province-wide lockout-strike situation.

"We had a bad break today. The metal trades group threw a curve at us and it's questionable whether they'll be back," said George Wheaton, Construction Labor Relations Association chairman.

Wheaton, who heads a Victoria construction firm, has been taking part in continuing talks between CLRA and the unions in Vancouver.

"There's less than progress at this stage," he said.

The breakup with the eight metal trade unions came during a stalemate on individual union problems. Wheaton said discussion of monetary items "is still a long way off."

The unions have remained split in two camps with the metal trades in one and the basic trades in the other. The basic trades are headed by the carpenters, biggest of the 22 unions involved in the dispute.

A spokesman for the B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council said he understood little had been achieved during the talks so far. However, because of the lack of joint bargaining, the council is all but out of the picture. It serves as an umbrella organization for the construction unions.

Wheaton said certain individual demands of the cement masons, iron workers and electricians carried the threat of renewed strike action if they weren't resolved in any over-all settlement

The cement masons and carpenters took strike action before CLRA imposed an industry-wide lockout eight days ago. It is the fourth consecutive bargaining year shutdown since 1970 and it has brought work to a halt on the major share of an estimated $3 billion in building projects.

It was also to have idled 40,000 tradesmen, but union spokesmen say varying numbers are still employed on small jobs being carried out by union contractors who do not belong to CLRA.

On Vancouver Island alone, only 1,400 of 5,500 tradesmen are reported to have been affected so far by the shutdown.

Some 850 contracting firms are represented by CLRA.

Wheaton said the cement masons are only willing to forego their demand for a catch-up wage increase if it is withheld from other unions with the same demand.

He said cement masons business agent Frank Stevens told CLRA negotiators his union is prepared to "stay out until Christmas" unless its demand is met.

Past shutdowns have lasted as long as three months.

There has been no movement toward new discussion of wage rates since CLRA's offer of an across-the-board eight per cent package increase was rejected June 2.

Wheaton repeated his charge that some of the union leaders are more interested in inter-union politics and rivalry than in the welfare of their members.

"The time has come for them to stop playing games with the welfare of the industry, their memberships and the economy of the country," he said.

Because a paralysis of construction is viewed by the government as a serious threat to the economy, Labor Minister Allan Williams has been keeping a close watch on developments. But to date he has made no effort to intervene.

While Wheaton heaps the blame on the unions, CLRA has been accused by a number of union leaders of creating the fragmented union bargaining structure that exists. They say that in the past CLRA has brought unions "in the back door" to deal with them separately.

Wheaton said CLRA's invitation to deal with individual union problems in the current talks has produced issues that weren't presented in the earlier talks.

"One union has confronted us with 12 or 13 pages of proposals we hadn't seen before," he said.

While he doesn't expect many of the metal trade unions to return to the bargaining table today, talks are scheduled with a number of other unions.

Queen delivers Rose Garden speech to U.S.

Colonist Wire Services

WASHINGTON — Queen Elizabeth raised her glass to the United States Wednesday night at a White House banquet as she told an audience of 200 that "today, no nation can stand alone."

"We depend as never before upon each other."

In an air-conditioned tent in the White House Rose Garden, the queen quoted her ancestor, King George III, in the words he pronounced to John Adams in 1785:

"I was the last man in the kingdom to consent to the separation. But the separation having been made, I have always said, as I say now, that I would be the first to meet the friendship of the United States as an independent power."

John Adams, who went on to become president of the U.S., was the first envoy to England from his new country.

"Both our peoples believe in the world of the individual and the family, in the freedom of religion and expression, and in the right to change a government by the ballot box rather than the gun, perhaps the best definition of democracy," the queen said.

"That is why, time and time again, in the testing days of war and the constructive years of peace, we have

Canadians support IOC

MONTREAL (UPI) — The Canadian Olympic Association sided with the International Olympic Committee Wednesday night and protested the federal government's stand on Taiwan's participation at the 1976 Summer Olympics as "a serious and unacceptable breach of faith."

In a formal statement, COA president Harold M. Wright said "the COA fully supports and endorses the position taken by the IOC in the matter.

"Political interference in the Olympic games, particularly where access of athletes to the country in which the games are being held is denied or interferred with, is unacceptable and contrary to the assurances required and obtained by the IOC when the games are awarded.

"The COA is as concerned as the IOC with the ramifications of the attitude of the Canadian government in its possible extension to future Olympic games."

Wright said when the COA approved Montreal's bid for the Games in 1969 it was on assurances from the Canadian government that it would allow entry to all athletes recognized by the IOC.

Wright stressed that "in the context of the Olympic Games, the question of principle involved was far more important than the particular facts of the two-China policy which has given rise to the controversy."

Canada's decision to recognize the People's Republic of China in 1970 did not alter Ottawa's "firm undertaking" in 1969 when Montreal prepared its application, he said.

'Think again on fares'

NANAIMO — The Social Credit candidate for Nanaimo in the last provincial election has called on Transport Minister Jack Davis to take another look at the increased ferry rates.

Graeme Roberts, who finished behind David Stupich (NDP) in the Dec. 11, 1975, voting, said Wednesday that governments are capable of making mistakes but, he added, "governments sensitive to the will of the people are equally capable of correcting their mistakes," and, he added, "do it."

He said in his letter to the minister that he was speaking for thousands of working people in calling for a rollback in rates.

"Pocket your pride," Roberts said. "Adjust your decision to where the 'fare is fair' and not beyond the means of the people you serve."

Roberts said one didn't need to be a Rhodes scholar to understand which was better for the Island economy — ferries full at $5 a car or ferries half full at $10 a car.

'Mocking' U.K. press criticized by Indians

EDMONTON (CP) — Six Alberta Indian chiefs returned Wednesday afternoon less than happy with their nine-day visit to the United Kingdom.

At a legislative building reception, some of the chiefs aired their views on the trip.

Both Chiefs John Snow and and Joe Dion said they expected the British press to have an unclear view of Indians but said that what they experienced was "mocking coverage."

Some British newspapers made references to "Injuns" and cartoons showed them dancing around a dinner table with tomahawks in their hands.

"I didn't expect a real good report from the press," said Snow. "But the queen was really quite receptive to us" and had extended the time allotted for their meeting.

"Our mission was to remind the queen that we have treaties with her. We are here to stay but our treaties have not been observed."

Snow was particularly impressed with the reception in Scotland.

"We have something in common with the people of Scotland," said Snow. "We both don't have a say in the decision-making process with our governments."

Dion said English people "seemed disappointed that we didn't act like they thought an Indian should."

"They have a stereotyped idea of Indians. They figured we should be like the cowboys and Indian movies they see," he said.

"Our reception with the queen went well but I sensed an uneasiness on her part. She didn't know quite what to expect, and we didn't get a chance to give a good statement on the treaties.

"She said the question of the treaties was very serious and then changed the subject."

Surprise ahead

MOSES LAKE, Wash. (UPI) — Whoever made off with a rod and reel, tackle box and cooler from a pickup truck parked at a local tavern near Moses Lake better have quick reflexes.

Police say the cooler contained several cans of beer and three large, live rattlesnakes caught by the owner.

Jack the Ripper—a royal U.K. coverup?

LONDON (Reuter) — A royal love affair, a freemason conspiracy and a big government coverup were at the bottom of the Jack-the-Ripper murder mystery which has intrigued Britons for 90 years, says a new book published Wednesday.

Author Stephen Knight, who researched the gruesome murders of East End prostitutes in 1888, claims three killers were involved, including Queen Victoria's personal physician.

He says the victims—records differ between five and eight—were all eliminated after they tried to blackmail the British government over a secret marriage between Princess Alexandra's eldest son, Prince Eddy, later the Duke of Clarence, and a comely shopgirl named Annie Crook. The marriage produced a daughter.

The alleged villains were Prime Minister Lord Salisbury who supposedly ordered the freemasons to silence the blackmailers and Sir William Gull, the Queen's physician, who, the book says, carried out the freemason conspiracy aided by a coachman named John Netley and the Assistant Commissioner of Police, Sir Robert Anderson.

The book, Jack the Ripper—The Final Solution, exonerates the aged Queen Victoria, who, it says, suspected a cover-up but had no knowledge of the conspiracy.

The author, who says he was allowed to examine secret Scotland Yard files on the mystery, writes that it all began when painter Walter Sickert introduced the young prince to the shopgirl.

They fell in love, a daughter was born and the prince went through a secret Catholic wedding ceremony.

But when news of the affair reached the government, it felt a scandal would give the coup de grace to an already unpopular monarchy. Lord Salisbury staged a raid on the lovers' hideout at Sickert's home during which the prince was seized. Annie Crook was certified insane and confined to Sir William Guy's hospital until her death 32 years later.

But an Irish nanny, Marie Kelly, escaped with the couple's child. The nanny told the story to some East End prostitutes who planned a blackmail plot which cost them their lives.

The alleged killers, led by Sir William, enticed the girls one by one into a coach and mutilated them, giving the impression that the murders were the work of a sex maniac.

Most of the book's evidence is based on a story told by Sickert to his son Joseph, whose mother was alleged to have been the daughter of the prince and the shopgirl. She later became the painter's mistress.

Neglect charged in Tally-Ho stables

Poirier

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Reporter

An angry Don Poirier said Wednesday he was fired after three days as barn manager for Tally-Ho sightseeing tours because he insisted on defending the company's horses against "extreme cruelty" and neglect.

But his charges weren't supported by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals whom he sicked on the company after his dismissal Tuesday.

And a company spokesman gave another reason for the firing. He said Poirier couldn't get along with his fellow employees.

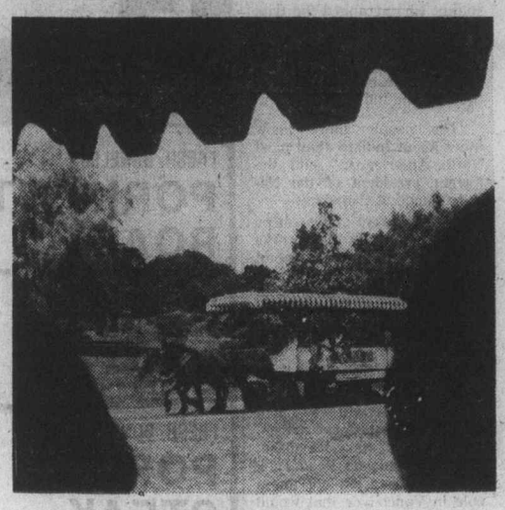

Poirier's claims that the company's horses were cruelly treated, had sores on their necks and mouths and that the lone stallion was neglected and seriously sick brought two SPCA inspectors into the picture Wednesday morning.

SPCA manager Don Adams said the inspection at the company's Blenkinsop Road stable disclosed some problems but nothing that would begin to support a case for prosecution.

He said the stallion's feet and legs were "not in good shape" and that it hadn't had sufficient exercise. In addition, a veterinarian was treating several horses for an outbreak of influenza and three teams of horses had been sidelined because of collar sores suffered through faulty handling, he said.

Adams said the horses had suffered the sores because an inexperienced driver hadn't known how to properly operate the brakes on the Tally-Ho sightseeing wagons.

Some of these findings coincided with complaints Poirier had made in a prior interview with the Colonist. He charged that most of the employees handling the horses were inexperienced and that he suspected some didn't know how to use the brakes.

Tally-Ho on rounds

He also said there had been an outbreak of colds and that his refusal to send sick horses into the streets played a part in his job loss.

"They kept calling for horses and I told them the horses were sick and not to bother me," said Poirier, whose normal occupation is as a mid-Vancouver Island independent logger.

He said company employees didn't seem to care about this and kept demanding more horses.

"They said they had a meeting the night before and had decided there were to be eight teams of horses on the road Tuesday. They ended up with seven teams."

He said that because of his heated arguments in defence of the horses he almost came to blows with one company official before he was fired.

Company trainer Bob Collins, who has now stepped into Poirier's role as barn manager, agreed several horses had suffered neck sores but said the inexperienced driver responsible had been fired.

"He never should have been hired in the first place," he said.

As for Poirer, he said: "He wasn't fired because of the horses. He couldn't get along with people."

Tally-Ho owner Daniel Arias, who bought the company in 1974, also denied the horses were being mistreated.

Adams said SPCA inspectors check the horses about once every two months. He said the inspection spurred by Poirier showed the stallion was in need of exercise and that a paddock for this purpose was partially constructed.

He said there was no legal definition of what adequate exercise was, the stallion, he said, is being treated by a veterinarian for poor circulation in its legs.

Any case of prosecution would depend heavily on the word of the veterinarian, he said.

"And the doctor says there is nothing inhumane here."

Collins denied charges by Poirier that the stallion's stall was filthy, that the stallion showed signs of never having been groomed and that it was never taken out for exercise.

"I take it out and exercise it three times a day," he said.

When he called the SPCA, Poirier said the stallion had been "down" three times Tuesday, was in danger of losing its life, was stoved (swollen legs) and had thrush (hoof rotting.)

"Champion (the stallion) is stoved and has thrush of the feet from being allowed to stand constantly in his own urine and manure and from standing on a rubber mat on top of concrete in a barn without proper ventilation, without proper drainage or proper lighting," Poirier told the Colonist.

"It is absolutely extreme cruelty the way Champion and the mares have been handled."

He said the mares were working with extremely sore necks because they were fitted with croupes instead of a britching harness, something which he said meant they took the full weight of the wagonloads of tourists with their necks and shoulders.

Due to the inexperience of the teamsters the majority of the horses come in every night with sores on their mouths and sores on the tops of their necks and extremely sore shoulders.

"I asked the owner (Arias) for some Epsom salts for the sores Tuesday morning to treat the sores and there was none there at quitting time."

Of Champion, he said: "I personally cleaned Champion's stall and there are people working there who say it hadn't really been cleaned in two years.

"It was evident Champion — he's only five years old — had never really been groomed or exercised. His hide was filthy with his own dirt and he had no real muscles.

"Allowing something like this is a disgrace to the city of Victoria. The trouble is, most people don't know anything about draft horses."

He claimed the stallion would have been in pain "beyond belief."

"It's a little like the prisoner in solitary confinement. Only for the horse, it's worse. Because the horse can't speak for himself and he won't cry out unless his life is in danger."

Meanwhile, Adams said the company had always cooperated willingly with the SPCA when the inspectors made any recommendations.

He said he understood there had been some delays in the building of the exercise paddock.

Arias said later the company building the steel enclosement had run into delays concerning material.

In denying that the stallion was neglected, Collins said: "The owner isn't going to risk endangering the health of a stallion that's worth $5,000."

Royal Oak group opposes industry

By ELEANOR BOYLE
Colonist Reporter

Royal Oak residents organized solidly for the first time Wednesday against proposed light industrial development slated to cover more than 100 acres around Glanford and Vanalman.

They filled Holland House auditorium to find out about plans after hearing that Saanich recently applied to have the land removed from Agricultural Land Reserve.

What brought most of them to the 8 p.m. meeting was a letter that had been delivered asking: "Would you like to sell your home for half its market value? You may have to if the municipality has their way."

Vocal audience members made it clear they didn't, and they told meeting chairman and author of the letter Lawrence Cook of Northridge Crescent, they wanted as little disruptive development in the area as possible.

No Saanich officials attended but one meeting organizer, Mary Szalai of the Northridge Community Association, outlined plans for the area largely destined for warehouses.

Audience members wanted details of any developments, and were concerned about increasing traffic and higher taxes without compensating higher land values.

Royal Oak ratepayers' group member Dick Gauthier said he had been told the warehousing would mean increased traffic of about 350 vehicles just between 3 and 5 p.m. daily, most of it travelling on Glanford.

Some surprising information the audience heard included:

- Glanford has been surveyed to become four-lane for more than a year.
- More than 20 acres of the land are already set aside for a B.C. Hydro lot that would house not only administrative buildings but also line trucks and other heavy equipment.
- Wilkinson Road is also slated for four lanes.
- Only landowners within the property boundary were invited to a recent Saanich meeting, and only a handful of those were homeowners there. Szalai said most are corporations or speculators.

Several people in the audience said the land will be developed in some manner, and that residents should propose alternatives to light industrial use.

Many stayed behind after the two-hour meeting to sign up for a joint Northridge-Royal Oak committee that will oppose any detrimental development.

And there was anger from some who said Saanich council members hadn't taken individual stands on the development issue. One man said he was denied his legal right to obtain a copy of council minutes when he went to the municipal hall recently.

The meeting will likely produce a flurry of protest letters to Mayor Ed Lum and B.C. land commission chairman Gary Runka. The more than 100 residents attending were given addresses and told that 100 letters to municipal council were "devastating."

Name harder to catch

Big-nosed catch held by 13-year-old Cameron Butts of 1122 Goldstream in Langford has elegant scientific name of hydrolagus colliei but lowly common name of rat fish. Fish is common from Baja, Calif., to Alaska and is usually found between 50 and 500 fathoms deep. Sharp point protruding from back of head is part of fish's spine.

Barber wants to debate labor

Charles Barber (NDP—Victoria) took his "strikes and lockouts are obsolete" message to the Victoria Labor Council Wednesday and challenged it to publicly debate the issue.

After the meeting, the freshman MLA said he would take the same challenge to the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce and is considering arranging a week-long seminar and debate where the whole issue of industrial democracy and worker cooperation would be discussed by labor, management, and outside resource people familiar with the European system.

Council president John Schibli said there was not time to discuss Barber's proposal at the meeting but later said a public debate might prove worthwhile. He doubted, however, that the European worker democracy system would meld with the North American tradition of a labor-management adversary system.

Barber later said he had no illusion about the unpopularity of his message, particularly among older trade unionists, and at one point during his talk to the meeting one delegate muttered: "I can't believe it."

Barber told the meeting that strikes and lockouts were now obsolete and had served their purpose.

"It is possible that these devices, devised in the 19th century, will not serve us in the 21st century," he said.

Race yacht in trouble

The U.S. coast guard went to the aid of a boat in the Victoria-Maui Yacht Race Wednesday, and another boat has withdrawn.

The fleet ran into 15-foot waves and a southwest wind blowing at 35 to 40 miles an hour in the fifth day of the 2,300 mile race.

P-zazz, a 36-foot sloop out of Tacoma, lost its mast in choppy seas and skipper Bill Nelson of the boat was waiting to be towed back home by the coast guard.

Race communications officer Tom Orr of West Vancouver said there was no reason to fear for the boat or its crew.

"They are about 270 miles due west off the coast of Oregon. The coast guard has dispatched a vessel from Astoria to go out and pick them up."

Thunder, a small 36-foot sloop from Portland, withdrew after experiencing electrical troubles.

The Seattle boat Joli maintained her lead after opening up 65 miles between herself and one of the smallest boats in the fleet — Orango-tang of Kitsilano — on Tuesday.

Joli still has about 1,650 miles to go to Maui.

Joli's sister ship Sorcery, which is registered out of Lahaina, Hawaii, is in second place now, 110 miles back. Both are 61-foot sloops built by C and C Yachts of Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ont.

They are followed by Race Passage out of Bremerton, and Terna III sailed by Per Christoffersen of West Vancouver. Terna III is about 165 miles behind Joli.

Vandals rampage

RCMP Wednesday began investigating several incidents involving vandalism and break-ins.

Vandals broke eight windows in the Rock City school overnight. A damage estimate was not available. It was the second time in a week that vandals hit the school.

Elsewhere a windshield in a truck on a car sales lot was smashed. A house at 803 Short Street was entered and about $25 taken and a room at the Commercial Hotel was entered and two wallets, both containing credit cards, were stolen.

Police also said the Cranberry Hotel was entered and an empty cash register taken.

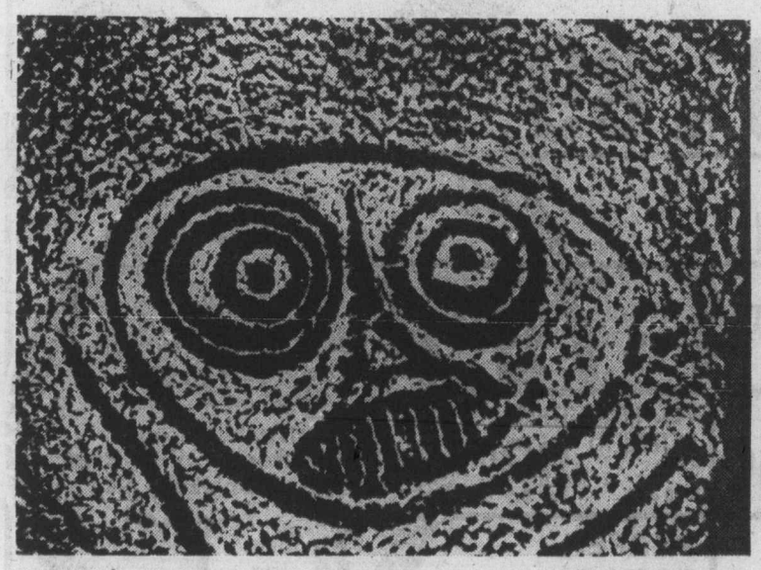

1,000 get work by computer

Just over 1,000 Greater Victoria students have been hired so far in the provincial labor department's Seasonal Employment program which utilizes an innovative new computer system.

Under the system, an applicant need only fill out one application form when applying for more than one provincial government job.

Nearly 4,000 jobs are expected to be filled this summer throughout B.C. through the student referral system.

Application forms were distributed throughout universities and high schools earlier this year and all completed applications were fed into the computer. Print-outs of all information were sent out to personnel officers who submitted job requests.

LARGE PETROGLYPH boulder was bulldozed in 1963 from Fulford Harbour floor at an extreme low tide during construction of Cudmore log dump, according to the book Indian Petroglyphs of the Pacific Northwest, by Beth and Ray Hill, published by Hancock House Publishers Ltd. in 1974. Book also mentions two smaller boulders with petroglyphs discovered at the same time.

Salt Spring petroglyph boulder

He wants to 'set record straight'

By HUBERT BEYER
Colonist Reporter

An angry Gordon Cudmore of Salt Spring Island "set the record straight" Wednesday with regard to a three-ton petroglyph boulder now sitting on his property, next to a airstrip he built several years ago.

The boulder with a large face carved into its surface will stay right where it is, and Cudmore has a letter from Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy saying so.

Cudmore lashed back at critics who recently accused him of removing the boulder from his log dump at Fulford Harbor on Salt Spring.

In an interview, he said he found the boulder below low-water mark with just the tip sticking out of the mud.

He found it while logging under contract with B.C. Forest Products.

Cudmore needed rocks at the time to protect a log dump, so he moved it temporarily to someone else's property.

"Nobody knew that the rock was where I found it, and nobody would have ever known, because it was in the mud in an area you can't get to," Cudmore said.

"Where it's now, people can see it: there's a road leading to the airstrip," he added.

"If anyone has a right to the rock, it's me, and next in line would be the Indians," Cudmore said.

The people who have objected most loudly to removal of the petroglyph boulder, he said, were the ones who wanted it for themselves.

He listed four names of people who had asked him for the boulder: one wanted to put it into a school, another in front of his store, the third wanted it moved to Centennial Park and the fourth to another store.

Cudmore criticized Mrs. McCarthy for not telling the B.C. Legislature a month ago that she had allowed him to leave the boulder at the present location.

At the time, Robert Skelly, New Democratic Party MLA for Alberni, asked in the Legislature whether charges would be laid against Cudmore for removing the petroglyph.

Cudmore said Mrs. McCarthy knew then that she had already given him permission to keep the boulder where it was.

An order-in-council, he said, had designated the rock as a historical site on May 19. Skelly raised the question in the Legislature in early June.

Cudmore also said that two other petroglyph boulders found by him at the same time (early spring), had disappeared.

"How come nobody is making a fuss about those rocks? They were stolen," he said.

One of the boulders, Cudmore added, had a quarter-moon carving on it.

He blamed old animosities for the fuss over his removal of the petroglyph.

Several years ago, Cudmore built an airstrip on his property, and the project was bitterly opposed by a number of Salt Spring Island residents.

He said the same people who opposed the airstrip had opposed the removal of the boulder.

"But nobody talks of the good the airstrip is doing. I don't get a penny's revenue out of it," he said.

Among those using the airstrip, he said, were the Canadian Coast Guard, forestry officials, the RCMP and some of those who tried to stop him from building it at the time.

"I built the airstrip because I wanted to fly, but it's been of benefit to the whole community at no cost to them," he said.

Cudmore said he hoped the whole thing would soon be forgotten.

"I think it was extremely unfair; the press reports made me look like a common thief," he said.

"I've been here since 1927 and I don't want to do anything detrimental to the community," Cudmore said.

Mrs. McCarthy wasn't available for comment on the matter Wednesday.
